Post-War Program

United States Army, Pacific

HAWAII, bastion of the Pacific, has changed. The thousands of soldiers, sailors, and airmen who paused on Oahu and the neighboring islands when Hawaii was a "jumping off" place for the vast

Lt. Gen. Hull

Pacific battle-front would scarcely recognize it today. Gone, or going, are the great supply dumps; gone the seemingly endless columns of military vehicles that choked the high-ways; gone the cantonments and the fighting men who occupied them, the battle-wagons and the crowded rows of LSTs in Pearl Harbor, the hundreds of planes that winged incessantly overhead. Hawaii is at peace again, but it may never be quite the same as before the ships, the troops, the planes, and the abundant paraphernalia of war came to crowd the islands. Much work remains to be done before the scars and debris of war are effaced, and there's a spirit of alertness that belies the size of the garrison. For Hawaii is still the keystone of Pacific strategy, and the Army forces are carrying on their work with a full sense of the importance of their tasks.

Even the familiar title has been changed. Known for nearly half a century as the Hawaiian Department, the military garrison is now the United States Army Pacific (USARPAC). Commander is Lt. Gen. John E. Hull, wartime Chief of the Operations Division, War Department General Staff. His Deputy and Chief of Staff is Maj. Gen. George H. Decker, combat Chief of Staff of the Sixth Army in the Southwest Pacific.

Under Admiral Dewitt C. Ramsey, Commander-in-Chief, Pacific, General Hull is one of the three members of the Joint Pacific Command Chiefs of Staff. The other members are the Commander, Hawaiian Sea Frontier, and the Commanding General, Pacific Air Command.

By direction of CINCPAC, General Hull, in an emergency, would command all fleet, air and ground forces committed to the defense of the Hawaiian area and General Decker would command the local ground forces.

Principal tasks of the army in Hawaii today are: training and reorganizing island ground troops and defenses; maintaining and improving army installations in the islands; and disposal of war surplus.

USARPAC also participates in studies concerning joint utilization of common facilities with the other sister services.

A constant stream of men and materiel destined for the forward areas flows through Hawaii, still an important link in the pipeline of supply.

Army-Wide Exams Set
For N.C.O. Promotions

The first Army-wide enlisted promotion examinations in history have been scheduled.

They will be held for Food Service Career Field Personnel from 16 to 19 Nov. The same examinations will be given on the same day and at the same hour throughout the Army.

Promotions resulting from these tests, which will be of the multiple choice type questions, will be made before the Christmas holidays.

Also disclosed were plans for the one-time grade adjustment promotions for certain personnel in grades three and two.

Thus, as a result of this action, it will be possible for some Food Service Personnel to receive double promotions—one as a result of the one-time adjustments and the other the result of the competitive examination.

The unprecedented announcement marks inauguration of varied Career Guidance examinations and, according to Army officials, opens a new era of competitive tests.

Said Brig. Gen. J. J. O'Hare, Chief Military Personnel Management Group, Personnel and Administrative Division, Army General Staff:

"The announcement of the first round of Career Guidance promotion examinations for Food Service Career Field Personnel is a demonstration of the Army's firm intention that the Career Guidance Program will move steadily forward.

"These promotion examinations are significant in that they constitute the first uniform Army-wide promotion examinations for enlisted personnel ever conducted by the Department itself. The era of Army-wide competitive promotion based on merit has now opened up for enlisted personnel."

Here is the examination schedule:

Examination	Grade	Date
MOS 000 Cook	Grade 4	16 Nov.
MOS 017 Baker		16 Nov.
MOS 1017 Pastry Baker		17 Nov.
MOS 037 Meat Cutter		17 Nov.
MOS 000 Cook	Grade 3	16 Nov.
MOS 824 Mess Steward		18 Nov.
MOS 2017 Master Baker		18 Nov.
MOS 1037 Master Meat Cutter		19 Nov.
MOS 1824 Food Service Technician	Grades 1 & 2	19 Nov.
MOS 824 Mess Steward		18 Nov.
MOS 2017 Master Baker		18 Nov.
MOS 1037 Master Meat Cutter		19 Nov.

The Food Service promotion examinations are already printed and are now stocked in appropriate distribution points. The examination asks a question and provides four answers from which the individual taking the examinations must select the right answer. There are no essay questions.

Army commanders have been instructed to open up the submission of applications for the examinations as soon as proper blanks are available. Adequate assistance is to be given all applicants.

At the same time, it was revealed that some enlisted men who complete the ex-

Honor Yugoslav Victims

The Hon. Arthur Bliss Lane, former United States Minister to Yugoslavia, has taken up the commendable task of collecting a fund for a suitable memorial to the five United States Air Force fliers who were shot down over Yugoslavia in 1946.

Mr. Lane's plans are set forth in a letter to the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL which we publish on page 3 of this issue. The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL heartily endorses this project and urges the support of members of the Armed Services.

AF Major List Release

The selection board report for permanent Air Force majors now is scheduled for release in time for publication in next week's issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

Air Force officials said that only Presidential approval of the list remains to be accomplished before its public release can be made.

Delay in publication of the list has resulted from the complex task of checking data concerning each officer recommended for selection.

Navy Promotion Exams

Navy officers reduced in grade as a result of authorization limitations will not be required to take written professional exams to be re-promoted to their former ranks, the Bureau of Naval Personnel decided this week.

Prior satisfactory service in a grade is considered to be an acceptable indication of an officer's professional fitness for that grade, the Navy said. This does not apply to appointments for a particular assignment since promotion during peacetime is based on ability as a well-rounded officer.

Professional promotion examinations, suspended during the war, will be resumed for permanently commissioned officers of the Regular Navy on the active list who will be promoted after 31 Dec. 1948.

Under the new exemption policy, all officers of the Navy who have been or who may be reduced in grade solely because of provisions of law, regulation or policy limiting the number of officers authorized in grade, will be exempt from written professional examinations for re-promotion to grades which they have previously held. Those who become eligible for re-promotion to their former ranks, will be examined on their records for promotion to that grade. The Navy pointed out that the authority of the examining board is not limited in those cases where the board determines the records to be inconclusive.

Army Promotion List

Work on the Army's promotion list is expected to be completed this month.

Release of the promotion list by the Department has been held up to permit a minute check to insure the highest possible degree of accuracy.

Senate Group to Study
U. S. Services Overseas

Senator Chan Gurney (R-SD), chairman of the Senate Committee on Armed Services, accompanied by a staff of assistants and liaison officers, left Washington 1 Sept. for an official tour of Europe and the Near East to gather information for his guidance, in the handling of Service legislation in the 81st Congress.

It is his intention to examine into the state of morale of Service personnel, the quality of the equipment being furnished them, and the effect of the foreign aid program on the economy of the United States and on the military requirements of the Armed Forces.

The committee chairman will visit England, including an inspection of the B-29 base there; Frankfurt and Berlin, to observe the workings of the air-lift; Vienna and Trieste, to inspect the American occupation forces; Athens and Ankara, to study the workings of the programs for aid to Greece and Turkey; and United States airfields in Tripoli and the Virgin Islands.

Accompanying the Senator and assisting him in his work are: Maj. Gen. Wilton B. Persons, USA director of legislation for the National Military Establishment; Rear Adm. Edmund T. Woolridge, USN, assistant Chief of Naval Operations for International Affairs; Maj. Gen. Bryant L. Boatner, USAF, Assistant to the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel and Administration, U. S. Air Force; Mr. Donald W. Smith, deputy director, Office of the Foreign Service, State Department, and Mr. John G. Adams, Chief Clerk of the Senate Committee on Armed Services.

Vice Adm. Forrest P. Sherman, USN, Commander of the Sixth Task Fleet, will join the group in the Mediterranean and accompany it in its tour of that area.

Before leaving on the trip, Senator Gurney told the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL that in his estimation the setting up of a Reserve system for all the Armed Forces should be the primary consideration of his committee upon the convening of the 81st Congress. He voiced no opinion as to the report of the Gray Board but said he would look forward with interest to the type of legislation the National Military Establishment will finally recommend.

Next in priority he placed the two projects of revision of Service pay schedules and the formulation of a unified system for the administration of military justice for the three Services.

Concerning pay, the Senator said that he hopes the forthcoming report of Secretary Forrestal's Civilian Commission on Service Pay "will provide a sound basis for equalizing the pay and emoluments among the Services. The pay should be attractive enough so that persons of sound judgment will want to make a career of the Armed Services. You cannot make this pay equivalent in a monetary measure to pay given for civilian work because so many other advantages are provided for personnel of the Armed Services."

Meanwhile, Representative Dewey (Please turn to Page 7)

Newport Meeting

Los Angeles Times—"The action of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is a dividend from the unification of the services under one head, a good thing which probably could not have developed under the former separate system."

Memphis Commercial Herald—"The plan of unification is all right. It will work if given half a chance and we go along all the way with the plea of General Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, to his fellow service chiefs to 'think only in terms of national defense . . . and the security of the country.'"

Denver Post—"If the present leaders of the services are not pliable enough to place the interests of the nation above those of their individual service, it is obvious that new leaders must be found."

Washington News—"If this latest division of responsibilities worked out in Newport turns out to be another Key West agreement, we suggest that instead of calling a third meeting Mr. Forrestal lop off a few official heads."

Washington Star—"Until everything shakes down into a smoothly functioning pattern of integrated operations, there probably will have to be several more conferences of the type held at Key West and Newport. Rome was not built in a day."

Baltimore Sun—"Naval air power may be employed on appropriate occasions without violating the Air Force franchise. This makes sense."

Wilmington Journal—"Key West marked the beginning of the effort to turn the legislative fiction of unification into reality. Newport, we trust, will bring us appreciably closer to that goal."

Christian Science Monitor—"The follow-up meeting at the Pentagon with 100 general officers and 200 others of high rank in all services is a hopeful sign. The feeling of teamwork needs to be carried all the way down the line."

Boston Herald—"We hope that Secretary of Defense Forrestal will keep pounding it into the Army, Navy and Air Force brass that they must cut out their inter-service knife."

New York Times—"There seems to have been an increase in good feeling—or a decrease in bad feeling might state it more accurately—among the top commanders. . . . Real integration must and will be accomplished, as it was accomplished in many combat areas during the war. We cannot afford to do otherwise."

National War College

The National War College, Ft. Lesley J. McNair, Washington, D. C., began its third session 30 Aug. with a class of 90 Officers from the Armed Forces and 20 key civilian personnel from Government Departments in attendance.

For the first time, representatives of the Treasury Department, Bureau of the Budget and Central Intelligence Agency are attending the College.

Vice Adm. Harry W. Hill, who has directed the activities of National War College since its inception, will continue his duties as Commandant, assisted by Maj. Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, USA, and Maj. Gen. Otto P. Weyland, USAF, as Deputy Commandants.

The program of study for the coming year will follow the general pattern of the two previous years, with the first semester devoted to a study of the problems of the atomic age, economics, politico-military aspects of international relations, and U. S. foreign policy. The second semester will include subjects of a more military nature.

The enrollment in the current class follows:

Super Carrier Statistics

The Navy's 65,000-ton, flush-deck, super-carrier, the keel for which will be laid late this year or early in 1949, will be 1,030 feet long and will carry a complement of 4,000 officers and men.

These statistics, which show that the new carrier will be 130 feet longer than the USS Midway, currently the Navy's longest vessel, were announced in a statement commemorating the third anniversary of the Japanese surrender aboard the USS Missouri on 2 Sept. 1945.

With a waterline beam of 130 feet, the new carrier will be the seventh Naval vessel whose girth prohibits passage through the Panama Canal. She will have no island structure. Flag and ship bridges will be telescopic.

At the same time, the Navy also officially confirmed a report, published in 21 Aug. issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, that a 14,500 plane Navy will be achieved by 1 July 1949.

Retired Promotion Payments

A "considerable number" of officers and enlisted men promoted on the retired list under provisions of Public Law 810 will receive pay of their new ranks in September checks and by the end of next month it is expected that all personnel for whom such promotion orders have been issued will be receiving the increased pay.

Supplemental vouchers will be utilized to cover retroactive pay at the increased rate, Army officials told the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL this week.

Disclosure that the increased retired pay computations would begin this month came in the midst of rumors that long delays were a possibility, since legislation approving these promotions was made after the 1949 fiscal year budget had been passed by Congress.

But this week the Bureau of Budget gave the Army the go-ahead signal. Budget officials said the payments could begin without delay. Immediately, Finance officials began the complex job of completing processing details necessary before the increased payments can begin.

Military and civilian personnel of the Finance Office were reported working overtime to effect the increased pay checks as soon as possible.

The hope is that this work will be completed by the end of October for all personnel already promoted on the retired list.

There was speculation in Army quarters that Congress may be asked early next year to pass a deficiency appropriation to cover the increased pay which was authorized for the above officers and enlisted men.

Gen. Bradley To Pacific

General Omar N. Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, will visit military installations in the Pacific during September and October.

This will mark the General's first visit to the Pacific since he was stationed in Hawaii in 1927 and 1928 in charge of National Guard and Reserve Affairs.

Tentative plans call for General Bradley to leave Washington in the latter part of this month and return to Washington around mid-October. He will inspect Army bases at various bases in the Central Pacific and Far East.

Birthday Greetings

The Honorable Tracy S. Voorhees, Assistant Secretary of the Army—"I am happy to extend best wishes to the editor and staff of the Army and Navy Journal on this occasion of the eighty-fifth anniversary of your publication. May your quiet efficiency be just as much a part of the American journalistic scene during the next eighty-five years as it is today."

Recess Appointments Valid

Assurance that officers nominated for recess appointments during the regular session of Congress whose promotions remained unconfirmed following the supplementary session, which was convened on 26 July, will receive pay of the higher rank is contained in a decision of the Comptroller General.

In a ruling concerning nomination of Federal Judge Edward A. Tamm, whose case exactly parallels that of officers whose names were presented to both sessions, the Comptroller General has determined that payment from Federal funds may be made.

The Comptroller General observed that both sessions of the 80th Congress adjourned—or rather recessed—to meet again on 31 Dec. at noon. Thus, the 80th Congress has not adjourned technically. Therefore, the recess appointments made during the Regular session and not acted on in the second session—which in official language was not an "extra" or "special" session—are valid and payment can be made.

USAF Golf Champions

A 12-man Air Force golf team, paced by Capt. Fred Moseley of MATS Headquarters, Washington, D. C., and Lt. Col. John Fitzgerald, Hamilton AFB, Calif., with 303 strokes each for the 72-hole medal play, last week captured the first James Forrestal interservice golf trophy at Pebble Beach, Calif. Captain Moseley won individual honors in a post-tournament playoff with Lieutenant Colonel Fitzgerald.

Third ranking golfer in the tournament was Army Lt. Jack Mann, Ft. Worth, Tex., with a posted 72-hole 304. Jim Kinder, USN, Naval Gun Factory, Washington, D. C., captured fourth position with 306.

The following officers and men, selected in the order of their final play in the National Air Force Golf Tournament at the Sonoma, Calif., Golf and Country Club Aug. 18, 19 and 20, comprised the USAF team:

Lt. Col. Jamie Gough, Barksdale AFB, Shreveport, La.; S. Sgt. Harley Long, Brooks AFB, San Antonio, Tex.; Lt. Richard Taylor, Davis Monthan AFB, Tucson, Ariz.; Col. James Wilson, Headquarters, USAF, Wash., D. C.; Capt. Fred Moseley, MATS, Wash., D. C.; T. Sgt. Harold Ridgley, Spokane AFB, Spokane, Wash.; Capt. Bert McDowell, Jr., Far East Air Force; Lt. Col. John Fitzgerald, Hamilton AFB, San Rafael, Calif.; T. Sgt. Christopher Griffin, Mather AFB, Sacramento, Calif.; Lt. J. H. Russell, Fairfield Suisun AFB, Fairfield, Calif.; Capt. Gen. Dahlquist on Career Plan

Because of its widespread importance to all enlisted men of the Army, a letter from Maj. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, Acting Director of Personnel and Administration, to a corporal is printed below in its entirety.

The length and detail of General Dahlquist's personal reply symbolize the extent to which top Army personnel officials are going in order to educate troops concerning the widely-heralded Career Guidance Plan.

This week, as the first month's operation of the plan was completed, inevitable initial misunderstandings rapidly were being cleared up, with field commanders reporting simultaneously almost unanimous approval for the new promotion policy.

And as thousands of automatic promotions through the lower grades, including promotions to grade four are foreseen—regardless of whether or not there are T/O vacancies—enlisted men were realizing that the Career Plan means increased pay in place of previous long delays pending development of vacancies.

One Army official explained the promotion scheme as follows: "It is important for everyone to realize that pay grade and title and stripe changes originated in the job up-grading program designed to put more pay, in terms of higher grades, in the lower-graded soldier's pocket."

At the same time, it was reported that plans are being made for the promotion of more men in the first three grades not yet classified into any career field. The Army expansion also will accelerate such promotions.

The text of General Dahlquist's letter follows:

"Dear Corporal—
"Your letter has been handed to me. I am answering it because of my interest in the career of all soldiers, including your own and because Dept. of the Army Circular 202, 1948, was worked up by officers under my direction. Let me tell you some of the reasoning behind some of the provisions of this circular.

"First it was felt that there should be greater opportunities for the peacetime soldier in the Regular Army. How could we fix it so that there would be possibilities for all men to advance to the higher pay grades without stumbling against the lack of a T/O vacancy? In the Army prior to World War II a soldier had to wait for vacancies, even for promotion to Private First Class (old pay grade 6).

"In working out Circular 202 it was decided that when a man completed his 13 weeks basic training or had four months service, he should be promoted to grade 6. This has been provided for. There has been some confusion in interpreting this promotion after 13 weeks basic training because of the new 8 weeks basic training course. Promotion in this case will be made when a soldier completes four months service if he is satisfactory to his unit commander.

"Our next problem was to promote a man above the sixth pay grade. In order not to keep a soldier in that pay grade because there were no T/O vacancies in higher grades, it was determined to promote him to the next grade—five—after 16 months service in pay grade 6 even if there were no T/O vacancies for him.

"Let me illustrate another problem by considering an Infantry Rifle Squad. We believe that a qualified member of a Rifle squad should be entitled, at least, to the fifth pay grade. If this were done, under the old grade titles, all the men in the squad might turn up as NCO's, which, I think you will agree, would make a peculiar squad. Based on this factor and others, it then was decided to change pay grade 5 from a non-commissioned officer title. In answer to this change-over, you must remember a man may be promoted to grade 5, if there is a T/O vacancy for him, but can still be so promoted without such a vacancy when he has served for 16 months and is a satisfactory soldier as determined by his unit Commanding Officer.

"The title Corporal is an old and honored one which we wanted to retain. Therefore we decided to use it for pay grade 4. Now promotion to this pay grade follows the same pattern as promotion to Grade 5, i.e., promotion if there is a T/O vacancy, or automatic promotion even if there is no vacancy. This automatic promotion can be made for men with 30 months of service.

"The Circular originally also provided that this 30 months be consecutive. Realizing this was an injustice to the man who had a break of more than 90 days between enlistments, especially to the man who had combat experience, this has been corrected. Now the 30 months is total 'good' (i.e. AWOL, confinement, etc., doesn't count for this time) service and does not have to be consecutive. All active, honorable, Federal service in any of the Armed Forces counts.

"The career field referred to by this Circular is an attempt to offer equal opportunities to all in the service. After the soldier enters his proper career field, he will have an equal chance with all assigned. Yes, he will have to take an examination for promotion. But this examination will be a combination written test and practical work. At the time a man takes an examination, throughout the Army all of his grade in that field will take the same exam. Vacancies will be determined throughout the entire Army. If, say, one hundred vacancies are found for one job in one field, then the top one hundred competitors will be promoted. Self-study manuals on the subjects required for each test will be published and supplied once a career field is established.

"Within the Department of the Army we are also now working on upgrading positions for all units. By this I mean increasing the percentage of individuals holding the higher pay grades.

"I hope that I have explained in this letter some of our reasons behind the provisions of Circular 202. I assure you that it has been planned to give to the soldier of today a better pathway of advancement in the service.

"Because I feel that some of these points I have mentioned in this letter to you may not be understood by others, I am giving it some publicity without using your name, organization or location."

Pay Report Drafted

A nearly completed preliminary draft of the report to Secretary of Defense James Forrestal is slated for presentation and discussion at a post-Labor Day meeting of the Commission on Service Pay.

A "good portion" of the report is already completed, officials said. However, several relatively minor points remain to be reviewed before writing of the critical report can be completed.

It is expected that this work will be accomplished at the forthcoming meeting. Estimation is that the finished document, which will play a major role in Congressional hearings on 'Service pay early next year', will reach Secretary Forrestal late this month or early in October.

A query to Defense officials late this week concerning plans for release of the pay report brought this response: "In the past, it has been the policy of Secretary Forrestal to release reports of his advisory commissions as soon as possible after completion of the studies. While no definite decision has been made as to when the Pay Report may be made available, it can be assumed that the usual policy will be followed."

According to present plans, the report will have a condensed section describing conclusions of the Commission, with an expanded appendix presenting detailed analyses of the Commission's reasoning.

As the work sped ahead this week, it was reported also that some last-minute revisions may be made in sections pertaining to pay of Reserve airmen. Several commission members have indicated a desire to visit Reserve flying bases before giving final approval to the official report being drafted by Executive Secretary John Hoen and his aides.

Temporary Promotion Rules

The Army intends to publish shortly—possibly this month—a circular describing new rules for the temporary promotion of both Reserve and Regular officers on active duty.

Indication has been made that a considerable number of Regular and Reserve officers—particularly in the lower ranks—will receive temporary promotions early next year as a result of the Army's forthcoming rapid expansion.

The new rules, it is reported, are designed to provide an equitable basis for the promotion of both Regulars and Reserves.

It is believed that, when released, the circular will prescribe a method whereby equal percentages of Regular and Reserve officers will be considered for temporary promotions simultaneously.

Thus, for example, if there were twice as many Regular Army lieutenant colonels on active duty as there were Reserve officers of the same rank, the ratio of Regulars to Reserves to be considered by selection for temporary promotion would be two-to-one.

This would not mean, however, that the promotions would be made on such a ratio. The best officers available will be selected, whether Regular or Reserve.

Memorial for Flyers Shot Down Over Yugoslavia

Editor, ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL:

As you may have noticed from the 2 August issue of Newsweek, I have initiated a movement to erect an appropriate monument to the five United States Air Force flyers who were shot down over Yugoslavia in 1946. The present inadequate monument, standing only 2 feet high above ground, reads merely as follows:

Harold F. Schreiber

Blair H. Freestone

Richard H. Claeys

Captains

Chester J. Lower

Matthew Comko

Corporals

Air Corps

Killed in airplane crash

August 19, 1946

As a former United States Minister to Yugoslavia I feel it important, in addition to honoring the memory of these heroes, to repudiate publicly, through the erection of such a monument, the implied policy of appeasement inherent in the lack of appropriate recognition of the loss of their lives in the performance of duty.

Any contributions for this purpose may be sent to me at: 2442 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W., Washington 8, D. C. Formal receipts will be issued, and the funds deposited in the Riggs National Bank which has agreed to act as my agent. The accounts in connection with the administration of this fund may be inspected at the bank.

Of the estimated sum required, $1,100.00, $450.00 has been received. It is urged that small contributions ranging from $1.00 to $5.00 be sent so that as many contributors as possible may be responsible for the erection of the monument.

Should the amount collected exceed the cost of the monument, the surplus will be turned over to the Air Forces Aid Society, or to any Army or Navy charity which the donor may designate.

Your readers will undoubtedly be interested to know that I have discussed the project of the monument with high officials of the Air Forces who not only have indicated their enthusiastic support thereof but have offered to me their assistance in realizing it.

Governors Oppose Gray Report

The Executive Committee of the Governors' Conference, meeting in Chicago, has unanimously adopted a resolution condemning the recommendation of the Gray Report that the National Guard be federalized.

This recommendation, the Governors declared, is "un-American, unconstitutional, and contrary to the basic philosophy of our American form of government."

Meanwhile, Representative Dewey Short (R-Mo.), who is slated to become chairman of the House Committee on Armed Services in the 81st Congress, told the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL that he has notified the authorities at the National Military Establishment that they had better not send any such controversial recommendation to Congress if they expect to get any other legislation enacted.

The text of the resolution as adopted by the Governors' Conference Executive Committee is as follows:

"WHEREAS the Executive Committee of the Governors' Conference regards the proposal to federalize the National Guard, as contained in the Gray Report to the Secretary of Defense, as un-American, unconstitutional, and contrary to the basic philosophy of our American form of government; The Executive Committee of the Governors' Conference unanimously recommends that (1) The National Guard system, under the militia clause of the Constitution, be retained. (2) The Congress of the United States be urged to initiate action to provide for the continuity of national government, both civil and military, in the event of a national disaster. (3) The Federal government particularly the Departments of the Army and Air be required to provide the National Guard with the most modern weapons and equipment to permit the attainment of the high degree of proficiency necessary to enable them to fulfill the accepted national role or mission as a part of the M-Day force, and that the best qualified officers and noncommissioned officers of the Regular Army be detailed as instructors."

Adoption of the resolution followed the reading of a letter from Governor Dwight H. Green (R-Ill.), in which he said that many of the recommendations of the Gray Board "are meritorious and will, in my opinion, be given favorable consideration by the Congress and if enacted into law will be most beneficial to the National Security of our Nation." However, he roundly condemned the recommendation concerning the federalization of the National Guard.

Stockpiling Report

The Munitions Board this week released a non-confidential supplement to the stockpiling report made to Congress. The report covers operations for the first six months of 1948, which was a period of major policy development. Among the policies established were a recognition of the extreme necessity of insuring the nation against a serious lack of essential raw materials in a war emergency, the development of substantial new sources of overseas supplies through the foreign aid program of the Economic Cooperation Administration, and the use of long-range contracts to stimulate production of materials in short supply.

In its report the board lists strategic and critical raw materials essential in war in three categories. In the first group are those of vital import for which only stockpiling can assure an adequate supply. The second group comprises those which are less urgently needed but which can be stockpiled to advantage, and the third group includes those which occasion such storage problems as to outweigh the advantages of stockpiling. The board is primarily interested in the first group, but it has stored some items in the second group which were secured from surplus stocks of other government agencies.

The first group includes 67 materials, ranging from agar, a seaweed product used for medicinal purposes, to zircon, a crystalline mineral of a variety of uses. Among other items on the main list are antimony, bauxite, bismuth, chromite, cobalt, coconut oil, copper, cordage fibers, industrial diamonds, graphite, iodine, lead, manganese, mercury, mica, nickel, opium, palm oil, pepper, platinum, quinine, rubber, shellac, talc, tung oil, tungsten, and zinc. These materials either are not produced in the United States or the domestic production is insufficient to meet the industrial requirements of a major mobilization. Among the items which the board feels it is impracticable to store in large quantities are asbestos, burlap, jute, cork, optical glass, iron ore, kapok, leather, petroleum, radium and uranium.

At present the stockpile of raw materials is seriously out of balance, but the board expects a substantial improvement in this respect within a year. The overall objective envisages a stockpile of strategic items of an estimated cost of $3,402,997,000. Of this amount stocks valued at $597,000,000 are now on hand, or about 17.6 per cent of our requirements. Of these supplies worth $424,000,000 came from surplus war stocks. This source has been nearly exhausted. Additional supplies in sight, largely from deliveries against current contracts, amount to $252,000,000. The board has on hand an unobligated balance of $490,000,000. Additional funds amounting to about two billions will be needed to complete the program. Much of the future procurement of these stocks will be made through purchases under the Economic Cooperation Act, which provides that at least five per cent of each special local currency account shall be allocated to the United States for the procurement of available strategic raw materials.

A short-range goal with a target date of 30 June 1949 has been set, by which time it is hoped to secure fixed but unannounced quantities of the most important supplies for the strategic stockpile.

Longevity Pay Ruling

The Department of the Army has announced that effective 1 June, 1942, any service performed prior to the attainment of 18 years of age will be creditable for longevity pay. This is reported in Circular No. 226.

Honor General Moore

Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall has presented the Distinguished Service Medal, Second Oak Leaf Cluster, to Maj. Gen. Bryant E. Moore, Chief of the Public Information Division, Army Special Staff.

The ceremony, held in the Secretary's office, honored General Moore for his distinguished performance as Commanding General of the United States Troops, Trieste, from September 1947, to June 1948.

The citation commended him for "his skillful organization, his foresight in planning for the entry of these troops into the United States Zone of the Free Territory of Trieste and his tactful and firm manner of handling problems arising from a tense international situation." He was further commended for the exceptionally high standards maintained by the U. S. forces in Trieste which "elicited the admiration of high governmental officials of the United States, United Kingdom, and Italian Governments, in addition to the respect obtained from the indigenous personnel in the Free Territory of Trieste."

17th Airborne Div.

The Advance Party of the reactivated 17th Airborne Division and the Personnel of the 2114th ASU, both stationed at Camp Pickett, Va., and under the command of Brig. Gen. Wayne C. Zimmerman, USA, are now busily engaged in rehabilitating the barracks, subsistence facilities, and recreational facilities. They are also preparing training areas and aids in anticipation of receiving the first Trainees on 1 October 1948.

UNITED STATES ARMY

New General Officers

The President has announced the temporary appointment as brigadier generals of the following officers of the Regular Army:

Col. Paul W. Rutledge, Port of Embarkation, New Orleans, La., with rank from 16 July 1948.

Col. Albert Pierson, Southern Sector Command, Ft. Ruger, Hawaii, with rank from 17 July 1948.

Col. Joseph P. Sullivan, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif., with rank from 28 July 1948.

Col. Fenton S. Jacobs, San Francisco, Port of Embarkation, Ft. Mason, Calif., with rank from 29 July 1948.

Col. Hugh B. Hester, Military Attache, Melbourne, Australia, with rank from 26 Aug. 1948.

Col. Kester L. Hastings, Chief of Personnel and Training Division, Office of The Quartermaster General, Washington, D. C., with rank from 27 Aug. 1948.

These officers are all given recess appointments, subject to confirmation by the Senate at the next session of Congress. All of these officers, except Colonels Grice and Hastings, were temporary general officers during the war, but were reduced to the rank of colonel incident to demobilization. Several of the new brigadier generals will fill existing vacancies and the others are being advanced because of the increased importance of the positions they occupy.

Secy. Royall at Reading

The strong international position which the United States has taken is meaningless without the ability to support that firmness, Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall warned this week in an address at Reading, Pa.

Secretary Royall said the Nation's determination to demonstrate a firm stand against totalitarian governments was brought about by "the dawning realization—and later by the firm conviction—that certain nations of the world intend to encroach upon the rights of others, and that these same nations are now threatening both democracy and peace."

He said the National Military Establishment is pursuing a course between the extremes of toughness and truculence and appeasement and weakness. Firmness and fairness, Secretary Royall explained, characterize the Nation's international policy.

Unless we would gamble the future of the country, the Army Secretary added, a large Army, Navy and Air Force are required. "We put our trust in a time-proven remedy against war—the strength and courage of a trained and equipped young Army," he said. "We rely for peace on the righteous power and potential of a nation dedicated to justice and freedom in the world."

Accompanying Mr. Royall were Col. George S. Eyster, Deputy Chief, Public Information Division, and Lt. Col. Willis D. Crittenger, jr., Aide.

May Shorten OCS Course

In the face of necessity for thousands of junior officers to lead company level training, the Army has under consideration a proposal to shorten the six months' Officer Training School at Ft. Riley, Kans.

In addition to the six months' basic officer training, successful candidates are given an additional three months' instruction in specialized branch courses.

Last month, the Army revealed plans to double the OCS output by beginning a class once a month instead of once every other month, effective in October.

Top Army officials said that no decision has been made as yet concerning the exact training period of shortened OCS courses. There is some speculation that the training may be reduced to the wartime length of three months, but this is only a rumor and review of the OCS curriculum continues.

Meantime, officials disclosed that an intensive campaign to sign up combat-experienced university students and graduates for active duty as Reserve Officers will be initiated in approximately one month.

Provision is being made for the call to active duty of a minimum of several hundred such second lieutenants every month. The Army hopes to obtain thousands of these men, who will be offered an opportunity to compete for Regular Army vacancies.

Keep up with your friends by reading the Army and Navy Journal each week.

U. S. Army, Pacific (Continued from First Page)

To assist in the defense of Hawaii, the USARPAC Provisional Infantry Regiment has been formed with headquarters at Fort Shafter. This unit is made up from all available white and colored manpower of the Headquarters and services including clerks, typists, drivers, garrison and supply personnel.

Training of the regiment presents exceptional difficulties because it is widely dispersed, and because its soldiers are not combat-type troops. However, a rigid training schedule is followed, wherever possible under simulated combat conditions.

The Civilian Components available to USARPAC consist principally of two regimental combat teams of the Hawaii National Guard. The territory is authorized sixty-two guard units.

Twenty-one Organized Reserve Corps units have been activated initially in Class "C" status (officer personnel only), including the famed 442nd Regimental Combat Team, with the equally illustrious 100th Infantry Battalion as the first battalion.

In addition there are seven Junior ROTC units on the island of Oahu with an enrollment of more than 3600, and one Infantry and one Artillery Senior Division unit at the University of Hawaii.

USARPAC is currently conducting many schools for enlisted personnel. Attendance at these schools include men of the other services stationed on Oahu as well as Army personnel from the Far East Command. Among the many schools conducted by USARPAC is the Fire Fighters Training School at Fort Kamehameha.

To improve driver efficiency and vehicle maintenance, an annual Motor Show has been established, which last year drew more than 35,000 spectators to Schofield Barracks.

Disposal of War Surplus

Surplus property has been disposed of and garrisons evacuated from Guadalcanal, New Caledonia, Canton Island and Tarawa. Property representing an acquisition value of $50,000,000 has been sold in these areas or transferred to other government agencies.

Approximately $100,000,000 worth of property in the Hawaiian Islands has been reported to the disposal agency for disposition while additional surplus property has been shipped to other commands for military use.

Army Installations Improved

Included in the USARPAC building program are the New Tripler General Hospital, a 1500-bed structure soon to be completed, a new theater and new barracks at Fort Shafter, and similar post-war improvements. However, billeting facilities for dependents are still insufficient, pending appropriation of additional funds.

All posts are gradually returning to their prewar appearance with removal of unserviceable war-time structures, passive protection installations, and the repainting of camouflaged buildings.

Army construction payrolls and purchases make an important annual contribution to the island economy.

A large part of Fort DeRussy in Waikiki operates as a recreation center for the officers and men of all armed services, from both the Hawaiian and forward areas of the Pacific. Kilauea Military Camp near the brink of Kilauea, an active volcano on the island of Hawaii, serves the same purpose.

During the war both camps played an important role in rehabilitating combat-fatigued servicemen.

The Pacific Zones of the American Graves Registration Service, with headquarters at Fort Shafter, is engaged in the task of returning the remains of World War II dead from forward areas.

The numerous small and large cemeteries which dotted the islands of the Central Pacific areas have all been cleared and the remains of those disinterred have been transferred either to the mainland or to the United States Army Mausoleum at Schofield Barracks.

Approximately 9,124 war-dead have already been shipped to the mainland, while 12,000 more are awaiting shipment to the continental United States or burial in the proposed National Cemetery on the island of Oahu.

An expedition of eight officers and fifty enlisted men has recently returned from a search of the south and central Pacific areas for isolated burials of World War II dead assisted by a detachment of army divers who are used to recover the bodies of men lost in airplane crashes in waters around the various Pacific islands. Further activities of this nature are contemplated.

An intelligence information center at Fort Shafter is now operating an early warning net twenty-four hours a day to transmit information to those concerned, including local civil authorities, in the event of any natural disaster such as the tidal wave of 1 April, 1946. Tied into this net are the Navy, Air Forces, Coast and Geodetic Survey, Coast Guard, and responsible Territorial civilian agencies.

1000-Bed VA Hospital

Lt. Gen. R. A. Wheeler, Chief of Engineers, this week called for bids for a 1000-bed Veterans Administration neuropsychiatric hospital at Houston, Tex. Bids will be opened 21 Oct. at the District Engineer's Office, Galveston, Tex.

Adm. Holloway Lauds Reserve

The Fleet Reserve and the Fleet Reserve Association were of inestimable value to the Nation during World War II, Superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy, Rear Adm. James L. Holloway, Jr., declared this week.

A guest speaker at the 21st Annual Convention of the Fleet Reserve Association in Dallas, Texas, 30 Aug., Admiral Holloway discussed at length the great value of the Fleet Reserve during the war years, and urged the Association to continue its best efforts to maintain the Naval Reserve at the same high levels of efficiency it displayed in the War.

Navy Research in Chemistry

"A Program of Basic Research in Chemistry," was the subject of an address this week by Rear Adm. T. A. Solberg, at a meeting of the American Chemical Society in Washington, D. C.

Admiral Solberg, who recently became Chief of Naval Research, told the group that the strength and welfare of the nation "are strongly dependent upon its scientific and industrial strength." Because the Navy and other military services are responsible for national security, he said, they must bring scientific information of military importance directly to the defense organization. The result, according to the Naval Research Chief, will be to keep the Armed Services "in close contact with the most advanced thinking not only in those areas of particular interest to their work, but also in the broad fields which are so necessary in planning and conducting intelligent development work."

Naval Research, he pointed out, takes full advantage of the guidance and advice of the country's leaders in scientific endeavors, both in planning and policy. Selected committees in all the scientific fields are called on to advise the Navy regarding its project activities. Present committees, he said, have reviewed and reported on over one hundred proposals, during the past eight months, for new projects and the same number of established projects. Another group "has reported on the availability of chemical personnel for research in universities and non-profit institutions." Admiral Solberg added that these committees donate their time without compensation, serving "wholeheartedly and patriotically."

All naval research, he emphasized, is coordinated first with the Navy Department and then with the work of the other services through the Research and Development Board, directly under the Secretary of Defense. Since the Navy's responsibility is primarily in the field of fundamental research "a large number of our contracts are with educational and non-profit institutions. They participate . . . by conducting expanded research programs," in which they share the cost.

Admiral Solberg told the group that "the Chemistry Branch alone has over one hundred projects proceeding in thirty-five . . . states at more than eighty institutions," and employing over two hundred graduate chemists and three hundred students.

The Navy keeps in mind an "objective point of view in undertaking research projects," he said, to insure maximum returns for national defense. However, "consideration also is given to the broad applicability of results, the development of important trends in various fields, training value and evidences of isolated genius." He pointed out that it has always been the Navy's policy "to take into consideration industrial and general civil needs." Examples cited were the Navy's investigation of lubricating oils which led to "great improvements in refining processes," and the work done on high-speed diesel engine development, since incorporated in diesel locomotives.

Discussing projects supported by the Chemistry Branch, Admiral Solberg said that "studies on the thermal decomposition of hydrazine and nitomethane are of special interest in the development programs of the armed services." Lubricants which will give reliable operation at extreme temperatures are wanted, he stated. "For many applications the lubricant should be non-inflammable," yet the problem of getting away from hydrocarbons for such service is still unanswered. "There is an important field for systematic and intensive research involving in the main, attacks by chemists. It involves not only fundamental studies on the compounds now used, but also the metals with which they are used and the fundamental effects of temperature over wide ranges."

Lives were unnecessarily lost, Admiral Solberg said, money needlessly spent, and the war prolonged because "we entered the war deficient in scientific resources and . . . deficient in our development of equipment and weapons." He suggested that we should profit by these lessons "by a policy to conduct intelligently planned and balanced programs of research and development."

"De-Mothball" Aircraft

The Marine Corps Air Station at El Toro, Calif., began work this week to reactivate its Assembly and Repair department in preparation for large-scale activities of restoring decommissioned aircraft to active service.

To assist in the reactivation program, 30 key specialists are being transferred from the Naval Air Station, Norfolk, Va. Three thousand civilian employees have been authorized for the new activity. These will be hired at the rate of 25 per day, with about 250 finding places by the first of next month.

The new organization will be formed under the leadership of Col. Elliott Bard, USMC, one of eight Marine officers selected to aid the project. Seventy-five civilians have been hired locally to accomplish initial opening of the shops, some of which are scheduled to be refitted for special projects. SB2C "Helldivers" and transport type aircraft have already been scheduled for recommissioning. Overhaul of conventional and jet type aircraft engines will be added to the project at a later date.

The Assembly and Repair department was constructed in 1943 and decommissioned early in 1946. At its peak during World War II it employed only 2100 persons, many of whom were Marines. Under the new set-up few, if any, service personnel will be employed.

CNO Reveals "New" Combat Fleet

Future Navy combat fleets will be composed entirely of submarines, aircraft carriers, and fast escort vessels, Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations, stated this week.

Speaking to members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at their National Encampment in St. Louis, Admiral Denfeld pointed out that battleships have not lost their value merely because the Navy has shelved all but one of them. They will continue to be useful in any future conflict, he said, and the Navy has shelved them only "for the time being" in order to concentrate on the "problems of the newest aspects of war."

The development and growing importance of Naval aviation was emphasized by the Chief of Naval Operations. "Today," he said, "we possess the finest Naval air force the world has ever seen, and Naval aviation has become the heart of the Navy." He added that this gives us a "priceless advantage" over any future enemy because "a combination of ships and planes can do things that planes alone and ships alone can't."

Mediterranean Ships Increased

One heavy cruiser and one destroyer will be added to the U. S. Fleet in the Mediterranean this month as 14 ships now on duty there are relieved in accordance with the Navy's announced policy of frequently rotating vessels in that area.

Marine Corps detachments assigned to the major vessels will return to the United States with them, and an equivalent number of Marine Corps personnel will be aboard the relief ships.

Headed by the large aircraft carrier, USS Franklin D. Roosevelt, the relief ships will consist of the heavy cruisers Albany and Columbus; light cruisers, Providence and Little Rock; one cargo ship, the USS Montague; and ten destroyers, Compton, Gainard, H. R. Dickson, Hugh Purvis, Hyman, Beatty, G. K. Mackenzie, E. G. Small, Power and Glenon. Five of the vessels are scheduled to arrive at Gibraltar next week where they will be joined by the remaining ships on 23 Sept.

Ships being relieved are the aircraft carrier Kearsarge; the light cruisers Fargo, Juneau, and Huntington; the cargo ship Marquette; and nine destroyers, Putnam, J. C. Owens, Henley, Zellars, Massey, Stribling, Cone, O'Hare and Meredith. The Huntington will return to the United States via the Suez Canal, Indian Ocean and Cape of Good Hope, calling at Durban and Cape Town, South Africa, among other ports en route.

Navy Band on Tour

The United States Navy Band has embarked on a fall concert tour which will carry it through Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Louisiana and Texas.

Concerts will be sponsored by local organizations throughout the tour states, with the profits going to local charitable or public purposes. Last year a tour was conducted through the southern states, and this spring the band appeared in 12 central states.

Directed by Lt. Comdr. Charles Brendler, the band will feature Richard Groves, vocalist; Ben Mitchell Morris, tenor; William T. Cameron, harpist; Homer Phillips, trombonist; Anthony Mitchell, clarinetist; Gordon Finlay cornetist; Carl Grove, saxophonist; and Harold Brusch, playing the euphonium. A trumpet trio, composed of Thomas Lloyd, Francis Stephens and Harold Wendt, will also be featured on the concert programs, with Robert Clark acting as commentator.

Six Admirals to New Stations

Rear Admirals Jerauld Wright, Ralph O. Davis, Walden L. Ainsworth, Robert P. Briscoe, Maurice E. Curtis, and Heber H. McLean, were ordered to change of duty this week.

No relief has been announced for either Admiral Curtis or Admiral McLean.

Navy Hydrographer Announced

Rear Admiral Robert O. Glover was relieved this week as Hydrographer of the Navy by Capt. Allen Hobbs. The ceremony took place at the Navy Hydrographic Office, Suitland, Md., on the day prior to Admiral Glover's retirement from the Naval Service.

A native of Norfolk, Va., Admiral Glover was a graduate from the Naval Academy in 1915, and served aboard both battleships and cruisers in World War I. During World War II, he commanded the battleship USS Massachusetts, during the occupation and consolidation of the upper Solomon Islands. Later, he became Commander, Service Force, Seventh Fleet, and in this command was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for meritorious performance of duty during the Philippine Islands-Borneo campaigns.

Captain Hobbs, who has served as Deputy Hydrographer since May 1946, was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1919. During World War II he served as commanding officer of the evacuation transport USS Rixey during the Solomon Islands action; as Governor of American Samoa with duty as Commandant of the Samoan Defense Group and Commandant of the U. S. Naval Station, Tutuila, Samoa, and as commanding officer of the USS Columbus.

Congress' Plans

Short (R-Mo), who is slated to become chairman of the House Committee on Armed Services in the next Congress, told the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL that he looks forward to taking up a pay measure early in the 81st Congress.

Mr. Short said that he is sympathetic toward a general pay increase for those under general officer and flag rank. He said that officers of such higher grades have been reported to him as being contented, but that those in lower ranks were suffering from pay inadequacy.

Representative Short also stated there is a possibility that there will be changes in the working arrangement for his committee. "The committee is pretty well agreed," he said, "that there are too many subcommittees and that it should be streamlined, as some subcommittees overlap and it has been difficult for some members to attend two conflicting meetings."

Recalling that there had been some sentiment expressed in favor of subcommittees for each of the Services, Army, Navy, and Air Force, Representative Short said that such a view is in the minority, and that in his personal opinion it would be a retrogression in that "they would fight each other and continue the lack of unification evident in the Services." "Rivalries," he declared, "are to be desired, but jealousies would ruin morale."

NBC Sponsors SC Unit

The National Broadcasting Company has accepted sponsorship of a Signal Corps Reserve unit under the Department of the Army Affiliation Program it was announced this week by Maj. Gen. Spencer B. Akin, Chief Signal Officer. In a letter received from Mr. Niles Trammell, President of NBC, the company has agreed to sponsor a Mobile Radio Broadcasting Company to be organized in New York City as a part of RCA's participation in this phase of the National Defense effort.

U. S. COAST GUARD

SIXTY enlisted Coast Guardsmen will retire voluntarily on 1 Oct. under the 20-year enlisted retirement law. The retirements were approved recently by the Commandant following selection based entirely upon length of service. All personnel whose permanent status is enlisted, including those presently serving in temporary commissioned or warrant grades, were given equal consideration. The minimum length of service for the group retired amounted to 25 years, one month and eight days, computed as of 30 Sept. 1948.

The retiring Coast Guardsmen, with their present ratings, are as follows:

Would Revoke Commissions

The House Committee on Un-American Activities recommended this week that the Armed Services revoke the commission of any officer who refuses to state whether he is or ever has been a member of the Communist Party.

In a report on Communist Espionage in the United States Government, the Committee said:

"During the course of these hearings, our committee was shocked to have before it witnesses who hold Reserve commissions in our armed forces and who refused to answer under oath whether or not they were, are, or ever have been members of the Communist Party. It was equally shocking to have former high officials of the Federal Government take such a position. The committee therefore recommends that the armed services revoke the commission of any officer who refuses to answer this question. The Communist Party is now accepted in all quarters as not being a political party in fact but a conspiracy working for the overthrow of the Government of the United States. The committee further recommends that any official or employee of the Government who will refuse to state under oath whether or not he is a member of the Communist Party should be removed, and his name 'flagged' against any future Government service."

Committee attaches said that the reserves who refused to answer the committee's question were Henry H. Collins, whom they reported to be a major in the Army Reserve, and William Ludwig Ullman, who they said is a major in the Air Force Reserve.

Meanwhile, it was announced this week that a program to coordinate and facilitate the efforts of the three military departments to prevent infiltration of disloyal persons into the Armed Forces has been prepared by the Armed Services Personnel Board. The Secretaries of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Treasury have been asked to make their comments on the Board's recommendations before they are sent to Secretary of Defense Forrestal for his approval.

Army Non-Com Promotions

amination successfully actually may receive two promotions.

Here's the explanation:

One-time grade adjustment promotions were authorized to lift men actually performing Food Service jobs to the grades appropriate to their jobs. The past operation of the promotion system has resulted in many cases where men performing Food Service jobs do not hold the grades currently authorized for those jobs. D/A Cir 203, 1948 required that men be raised to their proper grade level appropriate to their job to put them on a fair competitive basis with other men within the field. In order to secure this one-time grade adjustment to grade 2 and 3, D/A Cir 203, 1948 announced that individuals would have to qualify for the higher grade by satisfactorily completing the appropriate examination. These qualifying examinations authorized for grade 3 or 2 are also announced.

Instead of being separately administered, however, they will be combined with the regular examinations. Food Service personnel will therefore, where qualified and desirous of promotions, have to submit two Applications, one for the one-time grade adjustment and one for the next higher regular examination they wish to take on the assumption that they will be successful in qualifying for the one-time grade adjustment examination. Successful applicants who submit both types of Applications will thus emerge from the competition with two promotions—the one-time grade adjustment and the next higher regular promotion.

Gen. Spaatz Heads CAP

General Carl Spaatz, who recently retired as Chief of Staff of the U. S. Air Force, has assumed chairmanship of the Civil Air Patrol Board at Bolling AFB, headquarters of CAP, succeeding George A. Stone, of Columbus, Ohio, who was killed in an aircraft accident 20 Aug.

Upon assuming the position, General Spaatz issued the following statement:

"It is an honor for me to take up where my friend, the late George A. Stone, left off as Chairman of the National Civil Air Patrol Board. I am proud to be associated with an organization which encourages and aids American citizens in the contribution of their efforts, services, and resources to the development of aviation and to the maintenance of air supremacy. I will do my utmost to aid them to develop by example the voluntary contribution of private citizens to the public welfare."

Air Force Day

Fifty Air Force bombers, the greatest number of aircraft ever to participate in simultaneous individual operations on a world-wide basis, will fly long-range training missions on 17-18 Sept. as the feature of the observance of Air Force Day.

Air Force Day will be celebrated on 18 Sept. this year and in subsequent years, marking the date in 1947 when the Air Force became a co-equal member of the National Military Establishment.

Two Boeing B-29 Superfortresses will participate in each of the 25 long-distance operational flights from overseas bases to destinations in the United States. All the flights will be non-stop, ranging from more than 3,800 miles to more than 5,600 miles, and all will terminate at their announced destination at noon, local time, on Saturday, 18 Sept.

B-29s of Far East Air Forces and of Strategic Air Command's Eighth and 15th Air Forces will participate in the flights, with the bulk of the planes coming from Strategic Air Command.

Keep up with your friends by reading the Army and Navy Journal each week.

U. S. AIR FORCE

Berlin Air Lift

Since inauguration of "Operations Vittles" on 26 June, more than 100,000 tons of coal, food and other supplies have been flown in Berlin by Air Force transport planes on 15,687 flights.

An AF announcement said costs will continue to average about $260,000 a day for the transportation of about 2,500 tons. Costs include pay and allowances of crews and ground personnel, fuel, transportation of fuel, movement of units to Europe, the use of commercial trucks and commercial aircraft, labor and materials for maintenance, depreciation and loss of wrecked planes.

On 24 Aug. a record total of 492 flights by C-47 and C-54 aircraft were accomplished to bring 3,028 tons of cargo into Berlin. Thus, a plane landed at Tempelhof airfield at an average of every three minutes and 39 seconds.

There are 110 four-engine C-54's, 82 C-47's and one four-engine C-74 in Germany assigned to "Operations Vittles." They fly from Weisbaden AFB, the Rhine-Main AFB at Frankfurt, and the Royal Air Force airfield at Fassberg in the British sector of Western Germany.

On 21 Aug., American C-54s began flying into Berlin from the Royal Air Force airfield at Fassberg in the British Zone of Germany. In the first six hours of operations 13 of these planes flew into Berlin and unloaded 127 tons of coal. Operations from this field will continue with 27 C-54s assigned to operate from there.

Of the 15,687 flights arriving at Berlin thus far, 7,729 were made by C-54s, 7,953 by C-47s, and five by the C-74. The planes have flown more than 7,000,000 miles since 26 June.

Varying wind and weather conditions affect the time required to make the trip to Berlin. Since the start of operations pilots and aircrews of the C-47s and the C-54s have flown a total of 59,800 hours. Two-engine C-47s logged 34,072 hours of this overall total, while the balance of 25,728 hours was flown in C-54s and the lone C-47.

On the record-breaking day of 24 Aug. 56 planes of the total 189 then assigned to the airlift project were not used. Thirty-one C-54s and 25 C-47s were inactive on that heavy-traffic day. Nine of them were awaiting certain spare parts being flown to Germany from the United States, and the others were grounded for minor repairs, radio or electrical adjustments, and light maintenance work.

To Command 15th AF

Assignment of Maj. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell, Jr., Air Force member on the Permanent Joint Board on Defense, Canada-United States, and on the Joint Mexican-United States Commission, to be commanding general of the 15th Air Force, was announced this week.

He succeeds Maj. Gen. Leon W. Johnson, now in command of the B-29 groups engaged in routine training in England. The 15th is one of the two strategic bombing air forces of General George C. Kenny's Strategic Air Command. During World War II, General O'Donnell won wide acclaim for his command of bombers in the Pacific.

Headquarters for the 14th Air Force is at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Reactivate Chatham AFB

Tentative plans are being formulated for the reactivation of Chatham AFB, near Savannah, Ga. A B-29 Superfortress group of the Air Force's Strategic Air Command will probably be based there when the station resumes operations, scheduled for early Spring of 1949.

Flight Training Restriction

Because of limited facilities, the Air Force will eliminate flight proficiency training for rated Air Force Reserve officers on active duty with other branches of the service or with the Air Force as warrant officers and enlisted men.

Such training will be given to Air Force Reservists on inactive status only.

Spelled out in AF Regulation No. 35-35, 23 Aug., the new policy is as follows:

Rated Air Force Reserve officers serving in the Air Force as warrant officers or enlisted men will be governed by the following policies:

(1) They will not be utilized as Air Force Reserve officers to perform rated duties with the Air Force.

(2) They will not be called to active duty as officers for the purpose of training (Auth: WD AGO Letter, AGPR-D-A 210.31 (16 April 1947), 22 April 1947, subject: "Call to Active Duty for Training of Reserve Officers Currently Serving in Regular Army Enlisted Status").

(3) They will not be authorized to maintain flying proficiency as Air Force Reserve officers on inactive status.

(4) When recalled to extended active duty as Air Force Reserve officers, such rated Air Force personnel will, if otherwise qualified, be given refresher flying training to qualify them for assigned flying duties.

(5) Upon termination of warrant officers or enlisted status in the Air Force, such personnel will, if qualified facilities are available, be given an opportunity to participate in flying training on an inactive status.

Air Force Reserve officers holding aeronautical ratings who are recalled to active duty with the Department of the Army will not be utilized within the Air Force in the performance of flying duties, nor will they be authorized to maintain their flying proficiency by participation in the inactive training program of the Air Force Reserve.

Participation in the Inactive Reserve Training Program. The above policy should not be construed as restricting the inactive duty training (other than flying) of Air Force Reserve officers serving on active duty as warrant officers or enlisted men. Such Reserve officers should continue to participate in the inactive Air Force Reserve training program and may accrue credits for retention and promotion as Air Force Reserve officers through the accomplishment of other than flying training.

Status of Individual. Application of the above policy does not operate to invalidate the aeronautical rating or flying status held by an individual in his status as a Reserve officer. Personnel orders which were issued automatically at the time of acceptance of a Reserve commission, remain in effect for the entire period of the commission, except for such suspensions that may be imposed because of physical or professional disqualifications.

Discharge for Convenience of the Government. Former rated Air Force Reserve officers now serving as warrant officers or enlisted men in the Regular Air Force, who feel that their rights have been jeopardized by the provisions of this Regulation may be immediately discharged for the convenience of the Government in accordance with the provisions of AR 615-305. Applications for discharge under these provisions must be made prior to 1 December 1948.

Cleveland Air Races

Approximately 100 Air Force planes are slated to participate in the National Air Races at Cleveland on 4, 5 and 6 Sept. to demonstrate latest-type aircraft and aerial maneuvers.

Air Force participants will include: Lt. Col. David C. Schilling, group commander of the recent trans-Atlantic flights by jet planes, who will lead 16 F-80's of the 56th Group, Selfridge AFB, Mich.; Capt. Vernon Garrison, 1st Lt. Erwin A. Hesse and Lawrence E. McCarthy, who will demonstrate team aerobatics and precision flying; and 1st Lt. William J. Fenton and 1st Lt. Robert S. Fitzgerald, who will also perform formation aerobatics.

"Good Comradeship"

Air Force Chief of Staff General Hoyt S. Vandenberg this week described "Operations Vittles" as "a combined operation of good comradeship."

In a speech before the annual encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at St. Louis, General Vandenberg hailed Navy and Army cooperation in the Berlin air lift.

"The Navy sees we do not lack for gasoline," he declared. "The Army is doing a magnificent job of ground handling and distribution. The Royal Air Force shares such RAF installations as we require, in the cooperative spirit of wartime."

Discussing over-all Air Force strength in Europe, General Vandenberg said: "We don't have a big slice of airpower in Europe but there's nothing wrong with what we have. I talked with flight crews and ground elements and their morale bristles. That's a good sign."

Fighter Gunnery Research

To maintain fixed gunnery, rocketry, and dive bombing at a high standard of proficiency, fighter gunnery training research will be conducted within the Air Training Command at Williams Air Force Base, Chandler, Arizona, to:

(1) Develop training methods and techniques on such new equipment relative to fighter gunnery, dive bombing, and rocketry as has been developed, tested, and accepted by appropriate Air Force activities.

(2) Conduct, in the field of fighter gunnery, formal research and experimentation toward establishment of standards, improvement of individual proficiency, or solution of training problems encountered by tactical organizations.

Facilities are available for a limited number of officers to participate in this fighter gunnery training research, thereby enhancing their value to the Air Force and providing a medium of dissemination of fighter gunnery training research information to tactical units. The period of participation is approximately eight weeks.

Eligibility requirements:

a. All applicants must be USAF officers or officers who have indicated in writing their willingness to remain on active duty in accordance with the provisions of AFL 50-156.

b. Applicants for this participation must:

(1) Hold a currently effective aeronautical rating of pilot.

(2) Be qualified and competent to pilot combat fighter-type aircraft.

(3) Possess SSN 1055, 1056, or 1059.

(4) Have flown as pilot of combat fighter-type aircraft a minimum of 300 hours.

(5) Have flown as pilot of combat fighter-type aircraft at least five hours in the 30 days preceding application.

Buy More Liaison Planes

The Air Force will purchase an additional 154 L-13 liaison aircraft bringing to 300 the number of these planes now on order.

Contract price for the new purchase is $3,060,288. The plane is 40 feet, six inches wide; 31 feet, nine inches long and 11 feet, one inch in height, powered by an O-245 engine with a takeoff rating of 245 horsepower.

AF College Level Classes

Applications are now being accepted from Air Force officers at the Pentagon to attend off-duty college level classes for which the Government will pay all costs.

The University of Maryland will provide the instructors and will grant full college credit to officers who complete the classes. A varied list of subjects will be offered. Classes begin 27 Sept.

AF Tests XB-47

Second phase testing of the radical new XB-47 Stratojet bomber has been completed by a U. S. Air Force crew.

The Air Force crew, headed by Maj. Guy M. Townsend, USAF, Chief of the bomber flight test section of the Air Materiel Command, took command of one of the big new bombers at the Moses Lake Air Force Base in central Washington on 8 July. Capt. J. L. Ridley, USAF, acted as second pilot-engineer on the flights.

Views of Governors

IN response to inquiries from the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, the following State Governors have expressed their views on the recommendations of the committee on Civilian Components (Gray Board), as follows:

The Hon. Beauford H. Jester (Dem.), Governor of Texas.—"To change the dual status of the National Guard from a State and Federal force into a completely Federal force would be a violation of the Constitution (Clause 16, Section 8 of Article I), and a gross infringement of States' Rights if arbitrarily done. "I am most emphatically opposed to any such proposal and will resist such a movement with all the power and prestige at my command and I know that I will be backed up by millions of Texans."

The Hon. Kim Sigler (Rep.), Governor of Michigan.—"I have just returned from the 24 Aug. meeting in Chicago of the Executive Committee of the Council of Governors which approved a resolution expressing united opposition to the recommendation of the Committee on Civilian Components for complete federalization of the National Guard."

"I actively supported this resolution since I am opposed to any action which would destroy the present dual status of the National Guard. Complete federalization of the National Guard would destroy the deeply rooted community traditions of our National Guard units. This community pride and support of National Guard units is the source of the high esprit and morale demonstrated by these organizations in the exemplary fashion in two world wars."

"The National Guard as now organized is too effective and too much a part of our state institutions to sacrifice it at this time for the questionable efficiency of centralized control. Its very strength lies in the leadership generated from within the ranks of local units in thousands of communities throughout the nation. Any obstacles to rapid transfer of the Guard to federal control in time of national emergency can easily be corrected by simple changes in present statutes."

The Hon. Ernest W. Gibson (Rep.), Governor of Vermont.—"I consider the proposal to federalize the National Guard a grave mistake and thoroughly unsound. This is particularly true in Vermont which had the second highest rate of enlistments in World War II."

"It is a basic error in national security policy to even consider such a move, and would be a serious inconvenience to states where Guardsmen were needed in emergencies."

The Hon. William M. Tuck (Dem.), Governor of Virginia.—"The recommendation for complete Army control of the National Guard is another step in the direction of subjugating the states to Federal dictation."

"The proposed change is without justification. The Federal government has full power to assume control and direct the National Guard in periods of emergency. Units of the Virginia National Guard, as well as those of other States, have written records of unsurpassed achievement in both World Wars. The blood of our Virginia Guardsmen darkened fields of battle from Normandy to the farthest line of advance in the heart of Germany during the last great conflict. Their heroism was recognized in innumerable awards. The calibre of their service was of the highest order."

"From the content of the Committee's report, I fear that considerations other than the national defense have entered into the recommendations. I note that the Committee states that 'The use of the National Guard with its present powerful armament is not generally suitable for the execution of state missions in case of riot or other civil uprisings. . . . The guard as now armed should not normally be employed in strike duty or other minor civil disturbances. It should only be employed when the situation becomes fully threatening to constitutionally established authority.'"

"It would appear that the Committee may have given more consideration to the appeasement of minority groups, whose disregard for law and order has forced the use of the National Guard in some states for the preservation of respect and constitutionally established authority, than it has to the requirements of national preparedness."

"The present arrangement of joint Federal-State control has worked well and I oppose any move to deny the states during peacetime control over and use of their respective units of the National Guard."

"The history and traditions of the various State units of the National Guard are important in their esprit de corps. The feeling of being a part of a home outfit, under home control, is a great source of satisfaction to the members of the National Guard. Their presence within a State, where they are subject to call in emergency situations by State authorities, serves as a deterrent to public mischief and materially strengthens the arm of local government, which is the foundation stone of our democracy."

"It is worthy of note that the 116th Infantry Regiment and its artillery component, the 111th Field Artillery, participated in the D-day assault on the Normandy beaches, manned almost wholly by Virginians, and glorified American arms by their further exploits, capturing St. Laurent and Vierville, battling their way to St. Lo and contributing their share in encircling Aachen and breaking German military might. The 176th Infantry Regiment, the 246th Coast Artillery, and various auxiliary organizations which unfortunately failed to retain their state and local identities during the war nevertheless wrote brilliant chapters in our military history through their individual achievements."

"In these times, it is necessary that we be strong, not only in our international relations but internally as well. I can conceive of no greater aid to preserving this internal strength than through retaining local identities and State control over the units of our National Guard."

Gray Board Report

FOLLOWING is additional text of the report of the Committee on Civilian Components (Gray Board). Other portions were printed in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL issues of 14, 21, and 28 Aug.

Reserve units will continue to be required for the augmentation and expansion of the Regular Services, and their organization should be related to phased mobilization plans as revised from time to time; individual assigned and unassigned personnel will continue to be needed for augmentation, expansion and replacement purposes.

Studies have indicated that the needs of the three services for units will vary with specific requirements, but all services will require individual reserve personnel.

Complete and continuing surveys of existing reserve population should be made to ascertain the location, military qualification, civilian activities and availability of reserve personnel and to provide a basis for assignment in accordance with these factors.

Civil Air Patrol Should Cooperate With the States in Rescue, Disaster, Communications and Other Appropriate Missions.

Under Public Law 537, 80th Congress, the Civil Air Patrol is now an auxiliary of the Air Force and this status should be continued. Many of the missions for which the States require aircraft are within the capabilities of the Civil Air Patrol.

Legislation Should Be Initiated to Enable the Navy to Provide Training for the Coast Guard Reserve.

It is appropriate for the Navy to provide training for the reserve personnel necessary to augment the Coast Guard during war or national emergency because at that time the Coast Guard functions under the Secretary of the Navy.

Any Requirement, From a Military Standpoint, for a Civilian Pilot Training Program Should Be Determined by the Success Attained by the Air and Naval ROTC and Cadet Programs in Providing Military Air Crews.

In view of limited postwar experience, the need, from a military viewpoint, for a civilian pilot training program under the Civil Aeronautics Administration cannot be determined at this time.

Organization and training should be the responsibility of each service and appropriate to contemplated employment.

The mobilization requirements of the Army, Air Force, Marine Corps and Naval Aviation necessitate unit organizations not only for training but also for employment in combat. The organization of the surface Naval Reserve, however, is designed primarily to train individuals and not units. Thus each service has adopted an organization suitable to its missions. Training is likewise governed by these missions and the equipment provided to fulfill them.

Individuals in the Army and Air Force Reserve not assigned to tactical units but requiring training and administration are to be formed into training units to fit the requirements of the respective services and some elements of the Navy and Marine Corps Volunteer Reserves have already been so organized. Standard organization of the civilian components of the Army, Navy and Air Force is not considered practicable, however, because of their varying requirements for units and individuals.

The command, administrative and supply channels and the existing and presently proposed unit organization of the National Guard, Army Reserve, Naval Reserve, Marine Corps Reserve and Air Force Reserve are shown in Appendix 7 as are the organization of the Civil Air Patrol and the Coast Guard Auxiliary.

The Coast Guard Reserve is now inactive but the Committee believes legislation should be enacted enabling the Navy to provide training for the Coast Guard Reserve. If funds are made available, it is planned to support and train a reserve of 2,500 officers and 10,000 enlisted men. Coast Guard specialists in port security duty such as fire protection, loading of explosives, identification and other phases of waterfront security, will be organized into training units.

Members of the Reserve Forces Should Be Organized, to the Extent Practicable Under Mobilization Plans, Into Tactical or Training Units in Order to Facilitate Administration and Training.

One of the outstanding causes of dissatisfaction among reservists of all three services has been the lack of definite assignments. There are many reasons for the failure of the services to make such assignments. Most of these relate to lack of funds, facilities and equipment. An attempt by the Army, which was continued by the Air Force, to overcome this difficulty through the formation of composite groups has been unsuccessful because of the lack of a coherent training plan for the many different military specialists placed in such groups.

Present planning in the Department of the Army envisions the following unit organization:

(a) T/O&E units trained and equipped in accordance with phased mobilization requirements.

(b) Bulk type units (Table of Distribution Units) to provide personnel for domestic or overseas depots, training centers, ports, posts, camps, stations, etc.

(c) Training units.

War reserve stocks and probable peacetime industrial procurement cannot fully equip present strength in organized units. However, partially organized and trained units with a minimum of equipment are required to provide expansion cadres. These should be advanced to fully organized status only when

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1948

"Industrial preparedness, civil defense and mobilization of total resources for war assume at least equal importance with our particular problem of mobilizing military manpower."—MAJ. GEN. MANTON S. EDDY, USA.

WITH characteristic frankness and common sense General Bradley in his address last Monday at the national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars pointed out the necessity for discipline in our expanded Army, and for a greater appreciation on the part of our youth of the privileges and obligations of citizenship. The Chief of Staff made it clear that while our young soldiers will be treated compassionately, honorably and fairly, they will not be coddled. If to win the favor of our men we lose sight of the fundamental object of creating a combat force, he pointed out, we will not only fail the American people, but also the youths whose lives depend on their training. The civil and human rights of the soldiers will be safeguarded, but discipline will not be abandoned. So long as an Army exists to win battles, the General declared, that Army must be subject to discipline and command. The current expansion of the Army, the General asserted, will give us minimum armed security within a year. In his address General Bradley pointed out that in this troubled post-war period it is the Armed Forces that provide security for nations that would keep their freedom as well as their peace. He listed some of the commitments of this country which leave us no choice but to keep more than a million men under arms. The Chief of Staff took our educational system to task for failure to impress on our youth the necessity for national service. Our young men are appallingly ill-informed, he said, on the issues and crises that require their service. American education, he feels, has failed to give many of our youth an alert appreciation of their liberties and of their obligations. They have not learned that democracy is a two-way street, that benefits impose duties. Because of this failure of our school system it will be necessary for the Army to give added emphasis to its program of education. General Bradley's address is a reasoned, conservative statement by a great American soldier, whose brilliant service to his country in war and peace gives substance to his timely utterances. Surely room must be found in the curricula of our schools and colleges for more training for citizenship, for more old-fashioned American patriotism.

THE inactivation of the battleship USS Iowa and the restoration to the active Fleet of one light aircraft carrier and eight destroyers carries forward the trend which has marked the development of our post-war Navy. It means that there will remain only one battleship, the USS Missouri, in active service, and that the personnel thereby released will permit an intensification of training in antisubmarine warfare not otherwise possible with the limited funds and manpower available. The step-up of antisubmarine warfare training not only emphasizes the Navy's primary role in this field, as determined upon at the Key West and Newport Conferences, but also is realistic preparation for the type of attack we would have to face in the event of war. In spite of Russia's determination to expand her Fleet and her acquisition of vessels from the Italian Navy, it is believed that she has only three or four large vessels dating back to 1911 and no aircraft carriers. Most of her sea strength lies in smaller surface vessels suitable for action in the Baltic and the Mediterranean and in her large undersea fleet, estimated to total about 200. In capturing Germany's submarine construction yards and pens, she acquired not only a large number of Germany's most up-to-date submersibles, but she also took over construction machinery, blueprints and plans and the services of the best German designers and submarine experts who are now hard at work for the Soviet Navy. Our policy of carrying the war to the enemy would thus, in event of conflict with Russia, meet the same type of opposition as in World Wars I and II. But so revolutionary have been the developments in offensive undersea warfare since the end of World War II, particularly in increased speed and range of submerged action, that parrying it presents a much greater and more complicated problem. Accordingly our Navy is placing great emphasis upon the design and construction of special "killer" type vessels, "antisubmarine submarines," antisubmarine aircraft groups, and the development of electronic locating devices. In doing all this we are at the same time making ready for the use of submarines for our own needs, such as cargo and troop carrying and the launching of guided missiles.

IN a report to Congress this week, the Munitions Board outlines the progress made toward stockpiling strategic and critical raw materials essential to industrial production in a future emergency. At present our reserves of these essential supplies are seriously out of balance, but the board hopes for a decided improvement within a year. Included among 67 materials for which only stockpiling can insure an adequate supply are many products essential to the aircraft industry. Among these are hardening minerals, rubber, insulating materials, and many other items required for the fabrication of airframes and engines for fighting planes. These materials are either not found in the United States or the domestic production is so limited as to be far short of the requirements for greatly expanded industrial facilities in a major mobilization. The prime objective of the stockpiling program is to insure that the nation shall never again be placed in jeopardy for lack of essential raw materials. The sources of these supplies are such as to occasion no major procurement difficulties in time of peace, but their acquisition would be a serious problem in war. Many such materials can be procured in adequate quantities only from distant countries, with which normal communication might be cut off during hostilities. In any event the diversion of shipping and the navigation of submarine-infested and mine-strewn sea lanes would handicap our major combat efforts. Commodity prices have recently risen to such an extent that the stockpiling program will be much more expensive than originally contemplated. The overall cost of the completed program is now estimated at nearly three and one-half billions, of which two billions must come from future appropriations. Considerations of economy and security demand that these materials be gathered now in properly balanced quantities. Such a task would be difficult, if not impossible, after the onset of hostilities. Industrial capacity and availability of raw materials, as well as trained manpower, are essential to victory in modern warfare.

The Russian diplomatic note suggesting a conference of the powers for the discussion of disarmament breathes a spirit of peace but is not likely to produce much effect. SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—At the direction of their governments the American, French, British and Russian members of the Allied Control Council met this week in Berlin for the first time in five months. This resumption of the Council meetings was a direct result of the negotiations that have been proceeding in Moscow for the past month. The Berlin meetings opened the way for technical discussions by experts on the adoption of a uniform currency for Berlin and on the lifting of the Russian land blockade of the western-controlled sectors of that city.

Presumably Russian marks are to be circulated exclusively in all sectors of Berlin, but under four-power supervision. If this is the case there is a strong possibility of Soviet financial control of the city. Undoubtedly such a contingency is being considered and efforts will be made to set up adequate safeguards. Since the principal reason given by the Russians for the Berlin land blockade was the necessity for the exclusion of western currency there would appear to be no excuse for its continuance. If a currency agreement has been reached. The success of the Allied air lift in supplying much of Berlin with food, fuel medicine and other vital necessities was undoubtedly one of the considerations that led to an apparent settlement of the dispute.

The currency trouble and the blockade are only two of many points of disagreement in the controversy between Russia and the western powers. The other issues probably will be considered at a top-level conference of foreign ministers to be held in the near future, possibly at Paris during the forthcoming meeting of the Assembly of the United Nations.

The recent pro-Soviet demonstrations in Berlin against the non-Communist City Council were directed against the use of western currency in Berlin and the sending of a delegation to the meeting for the organization of a west German government. Apparently the demonstrators planned a coup whereby a Communist action committee would seize the municipal government, or at least that portion of it affecting the Soviet sector, from the regularly elected city officials. If the Allied Control Council can agree on a satisfactory implementation of the currency policies thought to have been agreed upon at Moscow the Communist demonstrations in Berlin probably will be discontinued.

On Tuesday last the Moscow radio announced the unexpected death of Colonel-General Andrei Zhdanov, who, after Stalin and Molotov, was one of the best-known and most powerful figures in the Soviet government. He gained great fame in directing the long and stubborn defense of Leningrad during the war. He was one of the fourteen members of the Politbureau, the Communist group under Stalin which has absolute control of Russia. Zhdanov directed the operations of Cominform, the official propaganda agency organized to spread Communism throughout the world, and which at the moment concerns itself primarily with controlling the Soviet satellite governments in eastern Europe. Zhdanov was violently anti-American and directed the Soviet fight against the Marshall plan. It was Zhdanov who led the bitter Cominform attack on Tito which resulted in the current split between Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union. At 52 Zhdanov was sixteen years younger than Stalin and along with Molotov was frequently mentioned as a probable successor to the aging dictator. There have been recent rumors of a feud between Zhdanov and Molotov. The effect of the death of this Soviet leader on Russian foreign relations is problematical. It removes from the scene a harsh foe of western democracy, but it not likely to occasion any major change in foreign policy.

Despite his difficulties with Russia and her puppet states Marshal Tito is still riding high in Yugoslavia. He has reorganized his government to strengthen his personal control and has promoted loyal officials who were directly attacked by the Cominform. He has also demanded that his neighbors and erstwhile friends, Rumania, Albania, and Hungary, cease their activities in promoting internal opposition to his government. These audacious measures have widened the breach between Yugoslavia and the other Communist governments. They can scarcely be disregarded by Moscow.

In Greece government troops are mopping up the remnants of the Communist insurgent force in the mountains along the Yugoslav boundary with considerable success. It is reported that Greek rebels crossing into Yugoslavia are now being interned by Tito. Previously the rebels were able to cross the border into Albania, Bulgaria or Yugoslavia, and return to Greece at will. If they are now being interned by Tito it represents a major reversal of policy, indicative of a more defiant attitude toward Moscow.

The month-old Marie government of France chose a most inopportune time to collapse. It fell apart because of domestic issues while important negotiations with Russia were in progress and almost on the eve of the meeting in Paris of the Assembly of the United Nations. The withdrawal of Socialist support on the question of general wage increases necessitated the resignation of the cabinet. However, the Chamber of Deputies by a narrow margin has given the new premier, Robert Schuman, a vote of confidence, and there is some hope that he may be able to maintain a moderate, middle-of-the-road government for at least a few months. Apparently he does not seek the support of the Communist left or the De Gaulle right. He has announced a policy of rigid governmental economy and a reduction of the cost of living, with the primary object of saving the franc. While Schuman is apparently acceptable to the majority, there appears to be increasing support for De Gaulle among many Frenchmen who yearn for the stability of a strong government.

In Palestine an agreement has been reached to insure that Jerusalem will be spared the ravages of a conflict between Jews and Arabs. Both sides have agreed to respect the neutrality of the ancient city. However, numerous truce violations continue to be reported. Jakob Malik, the Russian delegate who headed the United Nations Security Council during August, called an emergency meeting of the Council last Monday at Lake Success to deal with the situations in Palestine and in Pakistan. However, nearly all of the other members of the Council disagreed with him as to the existence of an emergency and voted against discussing these subjects. Malik was supported only by the Ukrainian delegate.

The State Department has announced that the United States will discuss with other interested powers the future of Antarctica. This exchange of views apparently will include consideration of means for the security of navigation in far southern waters in any future emergency. The construction of naval and merchant vessels too large to pass through the Panama Canal has revived interest in the old and stormy passage around the tip of South America. Through the expeditions of Admiral Byrd and others the United States has interested itself in South Polar explorations but has advanced no territorial claims.

On the third anniversary of the formal surrender of Japan General MacArthur last Thursday declared that Japan, with the Philippines and southern Korea, would constitute a buttress of democracy in the Far East. The general characterized Japan as an oasis of calm in a turbulent universe and said that its well-ordered society is dedicated to the sanctity of peace. The statement created great interest among the Japanese, some of whom regarded it as an intimation to Russia that the general expected Japan to be allied with the United States in the event of a war in the Pacific.

General MacArthur's strong position against any general strike of the government employees in Japan has the complete approval of Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall. In a statement issued last Thursday Mr. Royall said that General MacArthur's recommendations to the Japanese government do not in any way conflict with any policy adopted by the Far Eastern commission or with any directive of the United States government. In a letter to the Japanese prime minister last July General MacArthur took the position that no person in the employ of the Japanese government should resort to strike or engage in any delaying tactics to impair the efficiency of government operations. Such a strike had been threatened by transportation and communications workers. The Soviet member of the Allied Council for Japan challenged General MacArthur's views and declared the right of Japanese workers to strike was indispensable. Mr. William J. Sebald, political adviser to General MacArthur, effectively answered the Soviet argument by pointing to the distinction between public and private employment. His position as well as that of his chief has been upheld by the Department of the Army. It is expected that appropriate legislation forbidding strikes by public employees will be enacted by the Japanese Diet.

General Kirk on Vaccination—Most of our deadliest diseases—smallpox, typhus, typhoid, yellow fever, diphtheria and others—can be wiped from the face of the earth, according to Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, MC, USA-Ret., former Surgeon General of the Army.

In a special article, "Hold Out Your Arm," appearing in the September issue of The American Magazine, General Kirk declares, "Smallpox is on its way out," and that with everlasting vigilance we can completely eliminate it. Pointing out that the annual rate of smallpox cases in the United States had dropped from more than 36,000 in 1904 to much less than 1,000 in the period 1940-44, the former Surgeon General says there would be none if every parent realized the social responsibility of seeing that each child is vaccinated once in every four years.

Smallpox is by no means the only disease against which we can immunize the human race today, the General's article continues. This was demonstrated during World War II, when we successfully vaccinated our Army and Navy against diseases prevalent in far regions to which our Armed Forces were sent.

Bearing on the success of the Services in combatting virulent and contagious diseases during the war, General Kirk points out that there were only 12 cases of tetanus in our Army of 8,300,000. Also, he notes that there were no deaths from typhus in areas where typhus was endemic, although some soldiers contracted the disease. We minimized the effects of the disease through inoculation, the General states.

Other diseases the Armed Forces successfully combatted by vaccination or inoculation were typhoid and para-typhoid fevers, yellow fever, cholera, and to some extent, the two plagues, bubonic and pneumonic, General Kirk reports.

After a review of some of the childhood diseases, whooping cough among them, which can be licked by immunization, General Kirk declares we have at hand the means to "wipe infectious disease from the face of the earth."

Sergeants Aid Polio Victim—Little nine-year-old Marian Hawco, of Ft. McAndrew, Newfoundland, is now en route to Warm Springs, Ga., for treatment that she might walk again, all because two USAF Sergeants, Fred Nicolle and William Davis, noticed the little Miss leaning on crutches against the Chapel of the Air Base at the northern outpost. Marian was an infantile paralysis victim; one of eight children. There was little money for costly treatment. The Sergeants—and Davis is the father of two children—started a fund-raising campaign among the Post's military and civilian personnel. They also got the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis interested in little Marian. This week, $4,200 in hand, little Marian was flown to New York City where, the Base Chaplain, Capt. Voight Sink, turned the youngster and the fund over to the Foundation.

Navy's Radio-Biological Research—The Surgeon General, Rear Adm. Clifford A. Swanson, has established a Council on Radio-biological Research within the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery to assist the Director of the Atomic Defense Division to determine the action to be taken on proposed radio-biological research. The Council will review all proposed research projects in the fields of radiation biology, diagnosis and therapy of radiation sickness, internal radiation hazards and methods of photographic dosimetry and personnel decontamination. It will also assign equitable priority to such projects and will recommend such projects to the proper laboratory for investigation. Members of the Council are the Heads of the divisions of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery dealing with Atomic defense and research, representatives from the Office of Naval Research, the Armed Forces Special Weapons Projects, and the Atomic Energy Commission. It is anticipated that this newly formed Council will meet at least twice annually, with the first meeting on or about 12 Oct. in Washington, D. C.

Air Force Generals To Boards—Detail of Air Force general officers for duty on boards and committees—approximately 75 zone of interior generals are slated for such service during the fiscal year—is to be considered a "priority assignment."

In a letter to all general officers in the United States, Col. L. L. Judge, Air Adjutant General, said that more than 50 per cent of these officers would be called to serve on boards and committees at various times during the year.

Their duties will include selection of officers for promotion, relief from active duty, advancement on the retired list, as well as for special policy-forming and planning assignments.

Corps of Engineers—Col. Chester C. Hough, CE, has been assigned First Army Engineer, succeeding Brig. Gen. George J. Nold, First Army Staff Engineer since December 1945, who was assigned by the Department of the Army as Division Engineer, North Atlantic Division, Corps of Engineers.

Assignment of General Officers—Within the near future the Department of the Army will announce a new commander of the Fifth Army, with headquarters at Chicago. Since the departure of Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker for Japan a few weeks ago the post has been temporarily filled by Lt. Gen. Manton G. Eddy. It is quite possible that Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge, who has just returned from Korea, may be given this assignment. Others mentioned in this connection include Lt. Gen. Willard S. Paul, Director of Personnel and Administration, General Staff, and Lt. Gen. Raymond S. McLean, Chief of Information. Another probable vacancy in the high command to be filled soon may be that of Director of Organization and Training, General Staff. Lt. Gen. Charles P. Hall, the present director of this division, has been ill for some time and may be retired. In the event of General Hall's retirement his successor, in all probability, will be Maj. Gen. Harold R. Bull, now acting director of the division. On receiving this appointment General Bull would probably be promoted to Lieutenant General.

Army Daughter Heads WAC Unit—Maj. Anne E. Sweeney, daughter of Maj. Gen. Walter C. Sweeney, USA-Ret., and Mrs. Sweeney, of San Francisco, Calif., has been assigned as Special Service Officer of the Women's Army Corps Training Center, Camp Lee, Va. She enlisted in the WAC in July, 1942 at San Francisco and was commissioned the same year at Ft. Des Moines, Ia. By 1 Sept. 1943, while serving at Ft. Air Force Avoiddupois—Revision of a wartime pamphlet which warns that "Overeating causes Overloading" has been undertaken by Air Force officials.

The bulletin is full of meaty data concerning the necessity for proper dieting and informs airmen that "an obese man has two strikes against him before he steps to the plate."

Preparation of a new pamphlet on this subject, Air Force officials state, does not mean that airmen are putting on excess weight. They explain that the pamphlet was published more than three years ago and needs to be brought up to date.

Army Medical Library—Maj. Frank B. Rogers, MC, who was appointed Special Assistant to the Director of the Library, has completed a six months' tour of duty at the Library and will begin an academic year at the School of Library Service, Columbia University, New York City, 20 Sept.

The horse breeding program on the 4100 acre station will be discontinued. The action followed transfer on 1 July of Army remount activities to the Department of Agriculture.

The Acorn Knot has been redesignated the USAT Sgt. George D. Keathley in honor of a Rifleman of the 85th Infantry Division who lost his life on Mt. Altuzzo, Italy.

The Check Knot has been redesignated the USAT Sgt. Joseph E. Muller, a squad leader of Company B, 305th Infantry Regiment, who lost his life near Ishimmi, Okinawa.

The Coastal Guide has been redesignated the USAT Sgt. George Peterson, a platoon sergeant of Company K, 18th Infantry Regiment, 1st Infantry Division, who lost his life while making a flanking attack on the enemy near Eisern, Germany.

Helicopter Lays Telephone Line—The feasibility of laying telephone wire for military purposes by helicopter has been demonstrated by Signal Corps engineers through recent tests at the Signal Corps Engineering Laboratories, Ft. Monmouth N. J. The tests also demonstrated that helicopters could be used advantageously for the inspection of field telephone lines.

To determine the accuracy with which wire may be paid out, a course was plotted and a marker placed in an open meadow. Wire was then successfully laid within a yard of the marker and between trees separated by a few feet.

In another test wire was laid across tree tops at the foot of a gully which had proved impassable for wire laying crews and had been by-passed. As a result of the short cut the wire line was shortened by half a mile.

MATS Crew Commended—Maj. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, Commander of the Military Air Transport Service, has cabled the following commendations to Lt. (jg) Robert C. Williamson, USN, and crew of the MATS airplane which landed safely at Bermuda last Wednesday on two engines, after two engines failed between the Azores and Bermuda. The airplane, an R5D, operated by MATS Air Transport Squadron VR-3 stationed at Patuxent, Md., was en route from Europe to the United States with 35 passengers, including 12 children and 20 women.

The crew of the airplane were: Plane Commander, Lt. (jg) Williamson; Copilot, Lt. Leo F. Lynch; 1st Navigator, Ensign Richard E. Case; 2nd Navigator, Lt. (jg) William M. Steuber; Flight Mechanic, ADC Enoch B. Vaughn; Radioman, AL2 Arthur W. Stenger; Radioman, AL1 Charles L. Kalaghan; Flight Orderly, AD1 Georgene M. Rodoni; and Flight Orderly, AD1 Helen P. Niznansky.

In addition, General Kuter cabled a commendation to Col. Thomas D. Ferguson, Commanding Officer of Kindley Air Force Base, Bermuda, who directed the efforts of the personnel of his Base and of the Air Rescue Service who intercepted and escorted the big plane to its landing. One hour after receiving the SOS from the stricken plane, the airborne rescue planes made radio contact and two hours later came into sight of the transport to escort it to a safe landing two hours later.

Army Chaplain Corps—Chaplain (Col.) Martin C. Poch, Officer in Charge, Personnel Division, and Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Earl D. Compton, Officer in Charge, Planning and Training Division, visited the Columbus Chaplain Supply Depot, Columbus, Ohio, the week of 30 Aug.-3 Sept., to take inventory and to determine a more efficient distribution of chaplains' supplies.

Chaplain (Maj.) Harold G. Elsam, Secretary, Military Chaplains Association, conferred with several officers of the Chicago Chapter of the Association and with Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Harold W. Schulz, Hq., Fifth Army, re the 18th Annual Convention and Training Conference to be held in Chicago in May of 1949.

Army Finance Department—Maj. Gen. William H. Kasten, Chief of Finance, returned to his office in Washington recently on completion of a trip to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. General Kasten made the trip at the invitation of the Brazilian Government. While in Rio de Janeiro, he visited Finance and Quartermaster installations of the Brazilian Army. General Kasten also inspected the Finance Office, U. S. Army, located in Rio de Janeiro. The office in Rio was established in 1946 to service the various military attaches and other Army agencies located in Brazil as well as neighboring South American countries.

Air Force Doctors and Dentists—General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, has ordered a survey by air inspectors within the zone of the interior, concerning utilization of doctors and dentists.

An official Force report said anticipation is that the AF will be called upon to give assurance to legislative bodies and medical associations that maximum utilization is being made of medical and dental commissioned personnel in performance of professional duties.

Inspectors are to report data relating to which activities must be staffed with doctors and dentists, which it is desirable to staff with such personnel, and which it is wasteful to employ the skilled professional men. The study is to be completed by 1 Oct.

Medical Department—Brig. Gen. Guy B. Denit has arrived in Germany from duty as Chief Surgeon of the First Army to succeed Maj. Gen. Edward A. Noyes as Chief Surgeon of the European Command.

General Noyes will return to the United States to assume command of the Brooke Army Medical Center at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. General Denit was Chief Surgeon of all Army forces in the Pacific during the war, and following end of hostilities directed a survey concerning the effect of atomic radiations on human beings.

Enlisted AF Officer Reservists—Recall of some enlisted men in the Air Force for active duty as Reserve Officers has heightened speculation that the Air Force may expand its utilization of such personnel during the expansion program.

Meantime, the most recent estimates available showed this week that approximately 6380 enlisted men of the AF hold commissions as Reserve Officers. Officials emphasize, however, that this figure is only a calculation based on a sample survey study of 10 per cent of the Air Force strength.

On this basis, it is estimated that 4710 enlisted men hold AF Reserve Officer commissions, 1200 Army, 150 Navy, 140 Marine Corps and 180 Air National Guard commissions.

Air Force Crashes—Air Force safety statistics made available this week showed that an all-time low rate of 116 accidents or 31 per 100,000 flying hours was achieved during June. In July, a total of 130 crashes occurred and during the first 25 days of August, 123 accidents were reported. Fatal accidents for June, July and August were 8, 19 and 12, respectively, with the number of killed numbering 26, 47 and 50 for the three periods.

Air Force officials said the increased incidence of accidents during August is attributed to the stepped-up operations in connection with intensification of the training program. During 1946, the rate of major accidents per 100,000 flying hours was 61; the 1947 rate, 43; and 38 for the first half of the current calendar year.

Army Field Forces—General Jacob L. Devers, Chief, Army Field Forces, was at Ft. George Meade, Md., on 1 Sept., visiting Headquarters Second Army. He was accompanied by his aide, Lt. Col. John F. P. Hill.

Lanahan, jr., Commandant of the Signal School.

When you plan to retire from active work why not make your home where living conditions are more pleasant, where health factors are more favorable, and where you can get the maximum of enjoyment out of life. Many people with these objectives in mind have been coming to Sunny St. Petersburg for many years.

They have found here an almost perfect combination of living conditions—a mild year-round climate with few extremes of heat or cold, sunshine 360 days in the year, all kinds of recreation, a wholesome, pleasant community and moderate living costs. It will pay you to investigate the Sunshine City. Come for a visit and you will want to come back to live. For booklets write J. M. Davenport, Chamber of Commerce.

New Navy Carrier Plane

A new Navy carrier plane, considerably faster and able to carry a heavier bomb load than present types, has successfully completed initial flight tests, the Navy announced this week.

The plane is the XAJ-1, combining two reciprocating engines located under the wings with one GE-Allison turbo jet engine in the tail of the fuselage. The flight tests were made at the North-American Aircraft Company, Los Angeles.

The plane is heavier than present attack types used in carrier operation, yet lighter than the Neptune (P2V) which was recently taken off from a carrier. Performance figures are not yet available. The plane will use its conventional engines for normal operation while the pilot will be able to "cut in" the jet for added speed under combat or whenever needed.

The XAJ-1 carries a crew of three seated in a pressurized cockpit. The plane has a tricycle landing gear, high wing, and four-bladed propellers. The propellers are designed to provide high takeoff thrust and excellent performance at high speeds and high altitude.

For ease of deck handling and maintenance, the outer wing panels of the XAJ-1 fold inboard, and the vertical tail folds onto the right surface of the horizontal tail.

Navy Sweats It Out

With little abatement in the current heat wave and every indication that sultry weather may last until mid-October, Naval officers in the Washington area are "steamed up" over a hard and fast order that coats must be worn in public although officers in the Army and Air Force are permitted to go about in shirt sleeves. At the office of Rear Adm. T. L. Sprague, Chief of the Bureau of Personnel, it was stated there would be no relaxing of the order.

FINANCE

Financial Digest

A recently released summary of general business and financial conditions by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, based upon statistics for July and the first half of August, would indicate some check in the inflationary trend which has given concern to economists for the past several weeks.

Industrial output declined somewhat in July, the Board reports, adding that part of the loss was regained in August. At the same time, prices of basic commodities declined somewhat further from mid-July to the latter part of August, reaching the lowest levels since August a year ago, but still 10 per cent higher than in that month last year.

With the decline in industrial output has gone unusually favorable weather conditions which indicate that bumper crops this Fall and Winter will serve to put a brake on food and commodity prices.

Department store sales during the July-August period have been substantially larger in dollar volume than during the same period in 1947, the Board said, adding that prospective restrictions in credit terms resulting from the reimposition of installment credit regulations on 20 Sept. may have been partially responsible for the increase.

Support purchases of Treasury bonds and certificates by the Federal Reserve System were large in July and August. These additions to the portfolios of the Reserve Banks were in excess of reductions in holdings of bills as a result of the Treasury cash retirement and market sales, and total system holdings of Government securities increased somewhat. A further increase in gold stock also added to bank reserves, the Board said.

With the increase of bank holdings of Treasury bonds and certificates, it is noted that commercial and industrial loans increased in large cities during July and the first three weeks of August.

MERCHANT MARINE

Merchant Marine

A Guide for Seamen Ashore, listing the various Institutions helping seamen in the ports of the United States and Canada, has been issued by the Council of Seamen's Agencies, and is being distributed without charge to seamen of all nationalities, ratings and creeds. Copies are available at the Personnel Service Desk, Seamen's Church Institute, 25 South St., New York City. It is reported the guide is especially useful to men just entering the merchant service as an introduction to the principal seamen's clubs, homes and institutes in whatever port their ship may dock.

The resale of Liberty ships continues abroad, and, where prices are reported, they are well above the original purchase price under the Ship Sales Act of 1946. The Liberty ship Joseph H. Nicholson was recently sold by her Panamanian owners to Scandinavian buyers for about $740,000, about $200,000 above the Ship Sales Act floor price. Recently, two Liberty ships were sold abroad at prices $160,000 above the original price.

Recent return of from 30 to 40 bareboat chartered ships by the Army to private owners, and the failure of the two-month bulk cargo chartering market to show signs of recovery have led to indications of disappointment in the shipping industry over failure of ECA (European Recovery) to provide the anticipated stimulant to American maritime enterprise. Although the ocean charter market was reported a little more active during the past week or ten days, the influx of unemployed foreign bottoms brought new low rates for fixtures of foreign vessels.

While the Maritime Commission this week was formally inviting the Nation's three largest shipyards to submit bids on the proposed 48,000-ton, 31 knot, super-liner for the United States Lines trans-Atlantic service, editorials throughout the nation took up the idea of such a ship with enthusiasm.

personnel, equipment and facility potentials warrant.

It is estimated that bulk type units will permit definite assignments and training for approximately 50,000 reserve officers who are now either unassigned or in composite groups. Training units will provide for many of those remaining, but these units should be related to definite training goals.

The Navy and Marine Corps do not contemplate any changes in existing organizational plans. A suggestion has been made that the Naval Reserve surface organization should stress the training of complete crews for the smaller ships of the fleet. Pre-war experience with this type of unit training and postwar success with the present organization indicate that it is not desirable to make a change at this time.

Efforts should be continued by the Navy and Marine Corps to incorporate more members of the present volunteer reserve into either organized units or volunteer training groups, whether with or without active duty training pay.

Of the three services, the Air Force has had the most difficulty in providing proper training for its reservists. While this is due partly to lack of funds, it may also be attributed to the policy of giving a little training to as many persons as possible rather than concentrating on those required by mobilization plans.

The organization of the present Air Force reserve is planned on the same general lines as that proposed for the Army, with consideration given to—

- The location of an adequate number of persons of the required skills at or near the proposed location of T/O&E units.
- The assignment of small reserve units to regular Air Force groups and wings (this is especially applicable to units required in the M-day force).
- Control and administration through regular command channels.

If the plan to include reserve force units in regular units is carried out, it may have some beneficial results provided it does not decrease efficiency of regular M-day forces and does not eliminate positions and responsibility for members of the reserve forces in the higher grades and staffs. In addition, the more advanced training of the regular units should not mask the actual effectiveness of the reserve units. The reserve units in regular groups and wings can be expected to have increased assistance in training, a better knowledge of mutual problems and a higher level of proficiency.

The present reserve units of the Air Force are controlled and administered through Air Defense Command, but these units are not intended to be employed in the air defense mission. For example, the responsibility for employment of light bombardment units is assigned to Tactical Air Command. T/O&E units should be administered and controlled, as are regular units, by the agency responsible for their tactical operation.

The Committee has received a suggestion that training units in the Air Force take the form of administrative units (Reserve Training Units) within the regular establishment with these units being charged with the administration and training of reserve personnel not assigned to operating units. It was also suggested that these RTU's be controlled and administered by the Air Training Command rather than the Air Defense Command. The Committee believes that the danger in this plan lies in the similarity of these units to existing composite groups which have been generally unsatisfactory.

Reserve Units Will Continue To Be Required for the Augmentation and Expansion of the Regular Services, and Their Organization Should Be Related to Phased Mobilization Plans as Revised From Time to Time; Individual Assigned and Unassigned Personnel Will Continue To Be Needed for Augmentation, Expansion and Replacement Purposes.

Studies have indicated that the needs of the three services for units will vary with specific available, these RTU's could provide an efficient training organization. Consideration should be given, however, to the training of personnel not assigned to operating units through assignment in excess of strength to T/O&E units, and through the formation of training units along T/O&E lines when personnel of the required skills are available.

Specialist Personnel Should Be Organized, Where Practicable, Into Training Units or Groups Designed to Advance and Utilize Their Professional Skills.

Preparation for modern warfare makes increasingly greater demands for more complex weapons and materiel and for increased use of all kinds of specialized skills.

It has been suggested that many specialists could well be of more value to the National Military Establishment if they were employed jointly by all services rather than as members of the individual armed forces. As this is largely dependent upon action taken with regard to regular personnel and is already under study, no recommendation is made by this Committee.

As a result of conferences with reservists, the Army intends to establish groups of personnel qualified in scientific skills. These groups will be selected on the basis of professional capabilities and will be assigned to research and development projects including the review and editing of technical manuals and publications. Upon mobilization, reservists participating in this program will be assigned to appropriate research and development installations, thus making full utilization of their capabilities and avoiding waste of skilled manpower.

It is apparent that a similar organizational framework could be established for training and utilization of procurement, medical, legal, public information, psychological warfare and intelligence personnel requiring training, who are not assigned to tactical organizations. Evidence before the Committee indicates that the services have not planned for the full utilization of these vitally important specialists and, in some instances, have lost valuable personnel. There should be no further delay or failure to maintain the interest of these individuals and to carry on their training. However, because funds for inactive duty training pay will be restricted, these groups will have to be limited or organized on a volunteer basis.

Requirements of the Services for Affiliated Units Should Be Consolidated and Presented as a Program of the National Military Establishment.

These units proved of high value in World War II. They may be of two general types (a) those organized primarily from personnel in a particular plant or industry, and (b) those organized primarily from personnel in the neighborhood of, but not employed by, a plant or industry having the facilities for training.

The Army has already had profitable experience with signal battalions sponsored by telephone companies, general and evacuation hospitals sponsored by hospitals and medical schools, ordnance maintenance companies sponsored by automobile associations, and railway shop and operating battalions sponsored by railroads.

It is now planned to enlarge the field by (Please turn to Next Page) organizing others, such as chemical laboratory units affiliated with the chemical manufacturing companies; engineer construction units with contractors and State public works departments; Quartermaster laundry units with civilian laundries; air service groups with the aircraft industry; and air transport units with the air transport industry.

At the present time the Army has 217 affiliated units, although agreements for over 1,000 have been signed with business and industrial sponsors and the target is approximately 2,500 units. The Air Force affiliation program contemplates the formation of 135 service type units and 675 air transport units. To date only three Air Force affiliated units have been activated.

The Navy does not have an affiliated program as such, but some of its volunteer electronics warfare groups are composed of individuals from and located in the neighborhood of related industries.

Industry is generally favorable to the program with reservations about accepting any responsibility for recruiting or too active a sponsorship, but there have been objections to piecemeal approaches made by the services.

The Committee's proposal would allow presentation of a definite program to leading state, municipal and industrial associations and to leaders of management and labor, and would thus insure fuller cooperation on all levels.

Members of the Reserve Forces Not Included in Operational Units Should Be Given Mobilization Assignments to the Extent Compatible With Mobilization Planning.

One of the most serious objections to the reserve program of all three services has been that no home is provided for individuals who do not have definite unit assignments. This applies to the great mass of Army and Air Force reservists and to the Navy and Marine Corps Volunteer Reserve.

The creation of bulk type units and training units as recommended in this report will do much to ameliorate this condition. Unquestionably, however, there will be some reservists in all services who cannot be given definite assignments. These individuals are required as replacements for early combat losses or as replacements for other personnel who will pass into the pipeline by way of schools, hospitals and en route to further assignment. This does not indicate that personnel in this category will be the last to be mobilized; many of them will be among the first required and are as vital to mobilization as members of units. If there is no pool of unassigned reservists, personnel assigned to units will have to be mobilized as individuals and placed in existing vacancies as was the case in World War II. Required numbers of such personnel can be determined by experience. Early formation of training units with definite training programs and credits will provide some of them with the home which they should have during peacetime and their importance in the mobilization planning should be stressed.

The Army plans to give notice of mobilization pre-assignments of individual officers to all units in the mobilization troop basis and to all expected vacancies on staffs at all levels.

The Navy has determined mobilization billets which must be filled during mobilization and individuals to fill those billets are being chosen by the District Commandants subject to annual review. Notification of assignment is planned only for those officers required on M-day and within a few days immediately following M-day, including personnel needed for ships' complements and to initiate mobilization on District Staffs, at District Headquarters and at mobilization stations. Enlisted personnel will not be given notice of pre-assignment because the number involved and the turnover would make such assignments too costly. Enlisted personnel will be called to active duty within quota requirements of each Naval District in accordance with job classifications.

The Air Force plans to pre-assign individuals to operational units to bring them to war strength, to training units, to headquarters and staffs, to replacement training centers and to individual assignments in connection with procurement and similar needs. These individuals will be given notice of their assignments. Those who cannot be utilized in this way will be given standby orders to training units.

Thus, it is evident that the three Departments plan to give definite assignments to many more individuals than are now so assigned and these plans should be carried out as completely as possible. Further consideration should be given to the desirability of assigning reservists to the selective service and induction machinery, and reservists not otherwise assigned should be administered through training units even though their location may not permit them to attend drills for training. Any attempt to give mobilization pre-assignments to all personnel will lead to much useless and misleading paper work, changing of assignments on mobilization to meet unpredictable requirements, and complications with employers with detrimental effect on the economic situation of the individuals concerned.

Gen. Bradley Speaks

The Army will safeguard the civil and human rights of the thousands of draftees but discipline will not be abandoned, General Omar N. Bradley declared this week.

He told delegates to the national encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars at St. Louis, Mo., that "as long as an Army is to maintain itself in the field, just as long as an Army exists to win battles in the event of war, so long must that Army submit to a system of discipline and command. And so long will it have distasteful tasks to perform."

General Bradley added: "If the Army in its effort to win approval from its men, obscures its first and fundamental objective which is the creation of a combat force, then it shall not only have failed the American people but it will also have failed the youth whose life may some day hang in the balance."

Like any housewife in the country, the Army is suffering from the high cost of living, General Bradley reported. "In the Army, as in the grocery," he said, "a dollar today will buy less than 50 cents' worth of goods."

Where it cost 43 cents to feed each man for one day in 1939, present Army ration costs per man are $1.06 daily and in the corresponding period, the price of shoes has increased from $3.05 to $5.50.

But General Bradley warned: "The ceiling on what we can safely spend for National Defense cannot be wholly fixed by economic equations. Because it is always far cheaper to prevent a war than to fight one, our military needs must be measured in terms of home security requirements, overseas obligations and in the likelihood of conflict—either through incident or another's intent."

"This air age with its emphasis on speed and striking power has made our ocean barriers highways for air attack, and consequently has increased our minimum needs for home security ground force troops. It has made necessary the permanent maintenance of a larger skeleton combat force for hasty mobilization. And it has created the need for a swift mobile striking force capable of denying to the enemy the aerial gateways to our coast."

"In the United States Army today, almost one out of every two soldiers is engaged in or supporting our overseas mission."

"Yet our ground troops—both in Europe and in the Pacific—have no offensive capabilities. They shall continue to be the symbols rather than vanguards of our armed force, representing and enforcing policies dictated to them by the United States Government, not by the Army itself."

"Their restraint and tactful conduct in Europe—especially in the blockaded city of Berlin—has shown them to be qualified and sturdy sentinels of American policy, determined to safeguard the peace."

Air Force Reserve

Redesignating of all AF Base Units (Reserve Training) as AF Reserve Training Centers has been announced. There are 41 AF Reserve Training Centers under the Air Defense Command, headed by Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, with headquarters at Mitchel AFB, Hempstead, N.Y. The change in name was described as a move to bring the terminology more in line with the assigned mission and function of the centers.

Liner Installs RCA Radar

Installation of the first radar unit aboard a Spanish passenger liner—the steamship Magallanes—was reported this week by Walter A. Buck, President of the Radiomarine Corporation of America. He said other RCA units soon would be installed aboard the liners Habana and the Marques de Comillas. All are owned by the Cia. Trasatlantica de Madrid.

Salerno Anniversary

The month of September, 1948, marks the fifth anniversary of the first large-scale invasion of the European mainland, when the Fifth Army, an Allied force composed of the British Tenth Corps and the United States Sixth Corps landed at Salerno, Italy, under command of General (then Lt. Gen.) Mark W. Clark. This force secured a base for the later operations in Italy, which were to give the hard fighting Allied forces in Italy many "firsts," the liberating of the Eternal City in June 1944 and the advance north through mud, over mountains, to the Valley of the Po and beyond, when the German forces in Italy and in part of Austria surrendered on May 2, 1944.

The forces in Italy, under General Clark's command, consisting of many nationalities and races, contained some twenty-five German divisions and eventually destroyed a number of them and thus aided materially the invasions of France and kept from that battlefield those strong German Divisions. The invasion of Southern Italy marked the breach of Hitler's "Fortress Europe." The Salerno landings marked the first fighting on the continent of Europe by strong American forces since 1918.

Some of the other American commanders who participated in the Fifth Army's landing at Salerno were: Maj. Gen. Matthew D. Ridgway, Commanding the 82d Airborne Division; Maj. Gen. Ernest J. Dawley and Maj. Gen. John P. Lucas, Commanding VI Corps; Maj. Gen. Fred L. Walker, Commanding 36th Division; Maj. Gen. Troy H. Middleton, Commanding 45th Division; Maj. Gen. Charles W. Ryder, Commanding 34th Division; Maj. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, Commanding 3d Division; and the First, Third, and Fourth Ranger Battalions, U. S., commanded by Lt. Col. William C. Darby, who was later to be killed near Lake Garda when serving with the Tenth Mountain Division.

The United States Navy and the Army Air Forces, as well as the British forces, all cooperated in making the landings successful.

Congratulates Speedy Airman

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg late last week greeted S. Sgt. Malvin G. Whitfield, winner of the 800 meter Olympic run and anchor man on the winning American 160 meter relay team, in a brief ceremony at the Pentagon. Sergeant Whitfield was an aerial-gunner in a B-25 medium bombardment group during the war and is now assigned to the 332d Fighter Wing at Lockbourne AFB, Columbus, Ohio.

Sports Front

WHEW! Have you taken a second look at that Navy schedule? It seems that year after year the Tars come up with the toughest slate in the country, bar none, and this season is no exception.

In a recent magazine article, Grantland Rice discussed the nation's top teams. Only two of Navy's opponents failed to make his list, and of his seven top outfits, the Blue and Gold meets four.

Here's what the daddy of 'em all has to say about California: "Cal has the best chance (of reaching the Rose Bowl). A squad of 248 includes 8 regulars and 20 other letter winners."

Missouri: "Don Faurot's Missouri squad compares favorably with the Big Nine's best." The Big Nine's best, by the way, look like Michigan and Minnesota.

Pennsylvania: "Leads the Ivy group (along with Princeton). Penn lost nine starters, but has Chuck Bednarik and strong replacements."

Notre Dame: "Coach Frank Leahy is taking dead aim at a third straight national championship."

Michigan: "The Western Conference offers a three-cornered scrap involving Michigan, Minnesota and Purdue. Even with Bob Chappuis and Jack Weisenburger gone, the Wolverines feature slick backs."

Columbia (apparently one of the breathers): "Fields offensive skill in Gene Rossides and Lou Kusserow."

Army (more about the Cadets next week): "Army or Penn State will win the mythical championship of the East. Arnold Galiffa has developed the poise to give Red Blaik's Cadets an aerial offensive from the beginning this year. Both offensively and defensively, better end play will develop. . . . The line . . . still assays high."

So there is the row George Sauer and his charges must hoe. The chore is not made any easier by the fact that the Navy Athletic Association this week ruled that Ed Golding, a letterman and probable first string guard, was ineligible for having technically completed four years of varsity play.

Advertisers in the Army and Navy Journal support the Armed Forces and are familiar with their requirements.
